Dedication.

With hopeful hearts, trusting that future generations may see what our eyes have not beheld, we dedicate this book to the man, woman, child, stroke of luck, or dispensation of Providence, that will give to Hopkins Athletes a

Hopkins Athletic field.

Greeting.

Whoever shall open this book of ours
We count as our friend and guest.
We have gathered a medley for his delight,
Let him choose what liketh him best.

Ho, Freshmen callow and sober Grads,
And learned men austere,
Uncles and aunts and maidens fair!
There's a trifle for each of you here.

But if your glance should fall perchance,
On a roast upon yours or you,
Do not be wroth, lest all believe
That this same roast is true.

No lengthy, learned preface ours,
We fear not the critic's whim.
We may say just now, as we make our bow,
This book was not made for him.

The Early Days of the Johns Hopkins University.

THE EARLY DAYS AT JOHNS HOPKINS were very different from the present days. As years roll on, the origins will be memories more and more vague, unless those who participated in the events make notes of what they saw and did; so I am happy to comply with a request to give some reminiscences.

How Johns Hopkins was possessed by the idea of establishing a University and a Hospital, and the supplementary idea that they should be united in an Institute of Medicine, will perhaps be never known. But the story used to be told that when this successful man of affairs was well advanced in years, and was questioning as to the disposition of his estate, some one said to him that "two things were sure to live—a University, for there would always be the youth to educate, and a Hospital, for there would always be the suffering to relieve." These great thoughts were certainly deeply impressed upon his mind, and when he died (December 23, 1873) each of his numerous nieces and nephews received a large legacy, while most of his estate—that is, from six to seven million dollars—was devoted to the foundation of the two institutions that make his name renowned.

Among the University Trustees, five were constituted the Executive Committee, on whom devolved a very large part of the administrative responsibility. These were they: Galloway Cheston, an educated merchant of the highest standing, quiet, reserved, sagacious and wise, who became President of the Board; Judge Dobbin, a man of eminence in his profession, who added to his other remarkable acquirements an unusual love for applied science, and who had his lathe, his telescope and his microscope at his country home near the Relay House; Judge Brown, who held the highest position on the Supreme Bench of Baltimore, and is well known to those who are familiar with the trying events of 1861, as "Mayor Brown," a man of wide acquaintance in educational circles, of courage, fidelity and devotion; Reverdy Johnson, Jr., who added distinction to a distinguished name, a graduate in Law of the University of Heidelberg, and a man of culture, leisure, and unusual power of attention to details; Dr. Thomas, a minister of the Society of Friends (in which the founder had been taught), a man of fervent spirit, impulsive, co-operative, hospitable, and devoted to good works. Closely associated with them was Francis White, who has been from the beginning, the unpaid treasurer.

It is a noteworthy circumstance that nine of the twelve trustees were also trustees of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, namely: Francis T. King, Galloway Cheston, George W. Dobbin, John W. Garrett, C. J. M. Gwinn, Lewis N. Hopkins, William Hopkins, T. M. Smith and Francis White. Four were also trustees of the Peabody Institute, namely: Messrs. Cheston, Brown, Dobbin and Johnson. The harmonious relations between the two institutions founded by Hopkins and that established by his friend, George Peabody, were due in a considerable degree to these conditions. When Peabody visited Baltimore, near the end of his life, Hopkins was invited to meet him at dinner, and heard from the lips of the world-famed philanthropist that he had taken more pleasure in giving than in making money.

Mr. Garrett has told the story in print. The conversation, as he gives it, was remarkable. Mr. Peabody, after observing that he would only give his own experience, without designing any advice, proceeded to say: "Mr. Hopkins, we both commenced our commercial life in Baltimore, and we knew each other well. I," said Mr. Peabody, "left Baltimore for London, and from the commencement of my busy life I must state that I was extremely fond of money, and very happy in acquiring it. I labored, struggled and economized continuously, and increased my store, and I have been very proud of my achievements. Leaving Baltimore, after a successful career in a relatively limited sphere, I began in London, the seat of the greatest intellectual forces connected with commerce, and there I succeeded wonderfully, and, in competition with houses that had been wealthy, prosperous and famous for generations, I carved my way to opulence. It is due to you, Mr. Hopkins, to say, remembering you so well, that you are the only man I have met in all my experience more thoroughly anxious to make money and more determined to succeed than myself; and you have enjoyed the pleasure of success, too. In vigorous efforts for mercantile power, capital, of course, and large capital, was vital. I had the satisfaction, as you have had, of feeling that success is the test of merit, and I was happy in the view that I was, in this sense, at least, very meritorious. You also have enjoyed a great share of success and of commercial power and honor. But, Mr. Hopkins, though my progress was for a long period satisfactory and gratifying, yet, when age came upon me, and when aches and pains made me realize that I was not immortal, I felt, after taking care of my relatives, great anxiety to place the millions that I had accumulated so as to accomplish the greatest good for humanity. I looked about me and formed the conclusion that there were men who were just as anxious to work with integrity and faithfulness for the comfort, consolation and advancement of the suffering and the struggling poor as I had been to gather fortune. After careful consideration, I called a number of my friends, in whom I had confidence, to meet me, and I proposed that they should act as my trustees, and I organized my first scheme of benevolence. The trust was accepted, and I then, for the first time, felt there was a higher pleasure and a greater happiness than accumulating money, and that was derived from giving it for good and humane purposes; and so, sir, I have gone on, and from that day realized with increasing enjoyment the pleasure of arranging for the greatest practicable good for those who would need my means to aid their well-being, progress and happiness."

When the time came to select a faculty, one of the Trustees, Mr. Cheston, was eager to bring to Baltimore some foreigner of distinction, without having any individual in mind. Without any knowledge of this fact, Professor Henry, of the Smithsonian Institution, and Professor Pierce, the Harvard mathematician, friends of Professor Sylvester, proposed his name. There were many interviews in London between the professor and the representative of Johns Hopkins, many letters, and some cable dispatches, before a conclusion was reached and the call accepted.

Before Professor Sylvester's appointment had been made public, a young man, who was then, I believe, a teacher in Pennsylvania, knocked on the office door, and when he came in, inquired in a modest tone whether Professor Sylvester was coming to Johns Hopkins. "What makes you ask?" was the non-committal answer. "Because I want to follow his courses," said the candidate. "How did you hear that he might come?" was the next question. "From Professor Pierce, of Cambridge; he wrote me so." "And what do you know of Professor Sylvester's writings?" "Not to know about Sylvester is to know nothing of modern mathematics." The modest young man received all the information that he sought, became a student, and subsequently a colleague of Sylvester, and his successor as editor of the American Journal of Mathematics.

Another of the earliest students was likewise attracted by the mathematical professor. An article, on a disputed question in acoustics, was published in The Nation, dated Baltimore, and signed "X." Promptly a letter came to me from Professor John Tyndall, of London, asking that his grateful acknowledgments be given to this unknown correspondent. Nobody could guess who "X" could be. An inquiry of the editor of The Nation revealed the name of Fabian Franklin, who was first a student and finally a professor of mathematics among us.

Professor Rowland was engaged in the service of the University before Sylvester. It happened in this way: I was a member of the Board of Visitors to the U. S. Military Academy in the summer of 1875, and on good terms with Professor, now General, Michie, in charge of the department of physics at West Point. "Where can we find a physicist?" I asked him. "There is a young man at Troy," he replied, "in the Polytechnic Institute, who has published a remarkable paper in the London, Dublin and Edinburgh Philosophical Magazine. If you want a young man, you had better talk with him." We telegraphed to Rowland, and he came down the Hudson, and we walked together on the banks of the river, through the paths of Kosciusko's gardens, he telling me his dreams for science, and I telling him my dreams for higher education. Thus began our relations. When I reported this interview to the Trustees, they said at once: "Engage that young man and take him with you to Europe, where he may follow the leaders in his science, and be ready for a professorship." The results can never be told as long as Rowland lives, for from that time onward he has been an active and successful investigator of difficult problems, and his work is not half done.

Professor Gildersleeve was perhaps the one person of all others fore-ordained (as the Presbyterians say) for a professorship in the Johns Hopkins. He was recognized throughout the land, by Whitney at Yale, and by Lane at Harvard, and by all other competent judges, as a leading authority in classical studies. He had published noteworthy books and articles. He had been an extraordinary teacher in the University of Virginia. He could bring to the University at once the distinction of a learned, accurate, versatile scholar, who was distinguished in Greek, excellent in Latin, well up in Hebrew, acquainted with Italian, familiar with German and French, and a lover of English literature. He was the ideal man of letters.

Dr. Remsen was another of the original appointments. Probably no one of the staff has come into personal relations with so many students as the professor of chemistry, so there is accordingly but little reason for speaking in this place of the inspiring qualities which are familiar to us all. His attainments in his chosen science are recognized at home and abroad, and his attention to every duty that devolves upon him as a teacher, editor and administrator are exemplary.

Of Professors Morris and Martin I have lately spoken as follows.

In the anticipation of a medical school, it was clear, that great attention should be paid the fundamental study of animal and vegetable life, so that the form and functions of the human body in their normal character should be well understood by those who were to deal with the abnormal and suffering. Biology was then an unfamiliar term, and it was not without an unacceptable flavor, but every thoughtful person who looked at the subject was quickly persuaded that the patient, laboratory study of physiology and anatomy, irrespective of all questions of the treatment of disease, was the best preparation for the study of medicine, and was also in itself a line of study full of serviceable attractions to those who wish to become naturalists. The rare gifts of Dr. Martin, as a teacher, demonstrator and organizer, had been discovered by Huxley and Michael Foster, and a sure career was opened to him in England; but he consented to come here and introduce the work in which the men just named were so distinguished. The biological laboratory which he opened, and the courses in biology which he conducted, at once attracted a company of remarkable men. Ably supported from the beginning by Dr. Brooks, Dr. Martin developed a school of biologists who acknowledge to this day with enthusiastic gratitude the benefits they derived from his knowledge, skill, clear-sightedness and enthusiasm. His early decline and death filled us all with sorrow. What his students and friends could do to perpetuate his memory, has been done by the publication of a quarto volume containing the noteworthy contributions which he made to the science of physiology.

Charles D'Urban Morris, a graduate of the University of Oxford, as Martin was of Cambridge, came here as a learned and skillful teacher of the classics to undergraduates. He brought with him the best traditions of the celebrated colleges where he had been a student and a fellow. He published little, but that little was good, and he won among us the renown of a successful and beloved professor, whose devoutness, earnestness, fidelity, frankness and scholarship were impressed upon all his students. His presence was like a fresh breeze from the north, on a warm and sultry day, and many a young man there is, now useful and perhaps eminent, who owes everything to one who was called "our dear old Morris."

The first announcement of the plans of the University was made, without authority, in The Nation, in January, 1875. The editor had heard from a trustworthy and responsible source what was projected in Baltimore, and he repeated the story in a friendly note, which was soon followed by a more elaborate and helpful editorial, often since referred to.*

It took some time for the community to grasp the idea of a university as it was here projected, but there were some wise men who responded heartily to the program as it was formally announced on the 22d of February, 1876. Among other tokens of approval came a letter from Professor Henry, which has never seen the light. A part of what he wrote is this:

"I confidently anticipate that this organization, which the trustees of the University have had the unusual intelligence to appreciate and adopt, will form an epoch in the history of education in this country, and that the name of the founder will hereafter be associated with discoveries tending to enlarge the bounds of human thought and to advance the world to a higher plane of civilization. Liberal appropriation has been made by individual States and by the general government for elementary education; indeed, it has been generally considered of primary importance to our form of government that the people should be well provided with the means of acquiring practical knowledge; but the fact has not been so widely recognized that the solution of great problems which affect the well-being of man in every part of the world, and especially in our own country, require men of profound thought, with adequate opportunity and necessary appliances for the successful prosecution of their labors.

* See The Nation, January 28, 1875, and again March 11, 1875.

"I am glad to learn by the plan of organization that the Johns Hopkins University does not intend to seek for popular applause, of which, on account of its material resources, it is entirely independent, but that it intends to lead popular opinion, and to rest for its reputation upon the profundity of the instruction which it imparts, rather than on the number of its pupils."

The like recognition early came from many sources. Among others, Professor Benjamin Pierce was most friendly, and Dr. Weir Mitchell uttered, in an address before the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty, brief sentences brimful of encouragement. Nature, the London weekly journal of science, once copied the program on its editorial page, with the simple headline, "A Model University."

Among the pleasant reminiscences of our university life are the visits of famous men from other universities, who have come to see us and whose voices we have sometimes had the privilege of hearing. It would be easy to fill many pages with such reminiscences. Many who have been here are now gone forever, among them, Lowell, Child, Whitney, Matthew Arnold, and Cayley. Of the living, the most eminent is doubtless Lord Kelvin (Sir William Thomson), who was here in 1884, and delivered a long course of lectures on molecular physics to the advanced students of the University and to a company of physicists who came to Baltimore from a distance expressly to hear him. They were called the "coefficients," with an allusion, I suppose, to their efficiency in stimulating the brilliant intellect of the lecturer by the inquiries and comments which the informal methods of the conference permitted. Lord Rayleigh was here at the same time. When some one asked him, as an intimate friend of Lord Kelvin, how long the lectures would continue, he replied, "I suppose they will end some time, but I confess I see no reason why they should." Von Helmholtz, the great German physicist, was here some years later, not long, indeed, before his death. It is an interesting reminiscence to have seen Kelvin, Rayleigh, Helmholtz, Cayley, Herbert Spencer, Klein, Moissan, and many more, almost on their knees before Professor Rowland's famous screw, down in the cellar, when it was guiding the diamond-point by which the concave gratings are ruled.

Huxley was the first of our distinguished visitors, for he came, one may say, before there was a university, to deliver an "opening discourse" at the beginning of the first academic session in 1876. One reason for asking him was the expectation that a medical department would soon be organized, and the determination, already made, to give emphasis to the study of the biological sciences. His address was well received by a very large audience assembled in the Academy of Music, but the speaker suffered not a little from an unfortunate incident. He had expected to speak without notes, but, after his arrival in Baltimore, the newspapers appealed to him so strongly for an advance copy of his address that he dictated the speech, at Mr. Garrett's country house, the day before its delivery. A copy was given to the speaker for him to follow when he stood before the assembly, but the copy was so indistinct that he could not read it. He said afterward that he was trying to recall exactly his own words, which he knew were already mailed to the journals in New York and other distant cities. The effort was painful and not quite successful. The speech is printed among the author's "American Addresses," and is worth reading even after the long interval which has elapsed since its delivery.

Another visitor of great distinction was the Dean of Westminster, the Very Reverend Arthur Penrhyn Stanley. He was only in town for a few hours, and asked on his arrival to be shown "something historical." So he was taken to the rooms of the Maryland Historical Society and to the Cathedral, and to the house of Mrs. Bonaparte, where he was greatly interested in the mementoes of Napoleon and his family. After dinner he attended a reception in Hopkins Hall, and spoke personally to a great many of the students, asking one and another where he came from, or where his family originated. His address was short and can readily be found in print.

No orator has been received among us with such enthusiasm as greeted Archdeacon Farrar when he came to us in the autumn of 1885. He had been invited to speak to the students in one of our halls, but as soon as his coming was announced there was such a demand for cards of admission that the Trustees were forced to open the Academy of Music, where his address was delivered to a large assembly, delighted with the charm of the speaker's voice and manner. He spoke with the very briefest notes; made long and felicitous quotations appropriate to his theme, and held the attention of his hearers as completely as if his discourse had been especially prepared for the occasion, though it was only on the evening previous that he heard of the change of plan which took him from a small academic hall to one of the largest theatres.

The quality of the students who have here been taught during the last twenty-two years is apparent in a scrutiny of the list of names and titles that are printed in the Register; but as this article is devoted to the story of the early days, a few words may be given to the nucleus of the students' corps, the original group of Fellows. The decision was reached to begin the University with the most advanced students who could be brought together by the reputation of the Faculty. Ten fellowships were originally offered, but so many admirable candidates appeared that the number was enlarged to twenty, and that has been the annual allowance. The company appointed in 1876 by selection, without regard to any consideration but merit or promise, well illustrated the working of the system. Several of those first chosen—Drs. Brooks, Morse, Adams, and Craig, are now professors in the University. Three of these had taken the degree of Doctor of Philosophy before their appointment as Fellows. Two of them—Drs. Lanman and Royce—became professors in Harvard University. Three others were called to professorships in other colleges—in North Carolina, Texas, Pennsylvania. Two went into affairs. One only of all the number has been taken away by death.

Now and then, in the course of academic life, there is some unusual assembly of the members of the University, the memory of which is vivid with those who take part in it, but is very dim to those who only hear the story. The opening of Levering Hall and the speeches of William E. Dodge, Russell Sturgis, Eugene Levering, and others, made a very strong impression. Even more impressive was the address to students delivered by Bishop Phillips Brooks, in the Physical Laboratory, at twilight, not very long before his death, six years and more ago. At an earlier day, Chief Justice Waite, of the United States Supreme Court, presented to the University (in behalf of the donor, Mr. Innes Randolph), a medallion likeness of his great predecessor, Chief Justice Marshall, a likeness which has since been reproduced in bronze, as the Marshall prize, annually given for some excellent work in historical or political science.

For many years this institution was a favorite resort of Japanese students, many of whom, if not all, won distinction after returning to their native land. One of this number sent to us, as soon as it was adopted and promulgated, a copy of the new constitution of Japan; and as there were among us many students of public law, it was decided to celebrate an event that was sure to attract the attention of statesmen and publicists the wide world o'er, because it marked an important advance in Oriental civilization. On the 17th of April, 1889, Hopkins Hall was crowded with professors, students and members of the bar of Baltimore. Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, lately Chief Justice of Michigan, and a leading authority on constitutional law, consented to preside, and the Japanese minister, Mr. Mutsu, sat upon his right, and nearby the secretary of the Japanese legation and our Japanese students. Judge Cooley delivered an address, the proclamation of the Emperor of Japan was then read, and noteworthy letters (among others one from Professor Woodrow Wilson) were also presented. A very bright speech on the changes in the political life of Japan which led up to the new constitution, was then made (in English) by Mr. Iyenaga, of Yanagawa. Rear-Admiral Balch, of the United States Navy, who went with Commodore Perry on his famous expedition, was among the most interested of the auditors. Among the pamphlets in the Library will be found a printed account of these remarkable proceedings.

The forty-sixth birthday of Sidney Lanier, the poet, was celebrated on the 3d of February, 1888. The occasion was the gift of a bust of Lanier from his kinsman, Charles Lanier, Esq., of New York, modeled by Ephraim Keyser, and now placed in one of the rooms of McCoy Hall. Some of Lanier's verses were read; one of his musical compositions was sung, and there were sonnets and letters and speeches appreciative of this gifted and lamented man, who during the latter part of his life was a lecturer in this University. The letters of Lowell, Gilder and Stedman show how a "poet of poets" was beloved and admired. They cannot here be quoted, but I must ask space to reprint these verses of a gifted writer, Miss Edith M. Thomas, which were read on that occasion:

The River flows, how softly flows
    (The one bank green, the other sere),
How sweet the wind that hither blows.

Its breath is from the blightless rose,
    Its voice, from lips of leal and dear—
The River flows, how softly flows.

Beyond, in dreams the spirit goes,
    And finds each lost and lovely peer—
How sweet the wind that hither blows.

Brief while the gleaming vista shows
    A singing throng withdrawn from here—
The River flows, how softly flows.

There mounts the wingéd song, there glows.
    The ardor white, of rare Lanier—
How sweet the wind that hither blows.

His voice rang fearless to the close,
    He sang Death's Cup with cordial cheer—
The River flows, how softly flows;
How sweet the wind that hither blows.

Here I close mere reminiscences, not because this is all there is to be said, but because my allowance of space has been filled.

CLASS-POEM

The lights were burning brightly in the House-Boat on the Styx,
 There were tables strewn with viands, there were waiters five or six,
 For 'twas the thirteenth day of June in nineteen ninety-nine.
 The hundredth class reunion had arrived on schedule time.
 A few invited guests were there, with whom the class might meet,
 Demosthenes had promised, as an after-dinner treat,
 To speak a few orations, if the diners thought it best;
 And Plautus, sitting by his side, with many a merry jest

Enlivened all the party, while they waited for the sign
 Of the heavy oaken gavel, which was due to fall at nine.
 At the table's head sat Fisher, and beside him Downes and French,
 They were the masters of the toasts. Their duty was to wrench
 Responses to the toasts from those who'd been assigned the tasks,
 While Charon, in the background, served oysters out from casks.
 At the table's foot was Reymann, who was playing chess with Frank,
 While he watched the guests come gliding in from off the Stygian bank.
 There were men there from the Faculty; the Censor, too, had come,
 And the Glee Club with the mandolins were there to make things hum.
 The one hundredth anniversary had started with a rush.
 The gavel sounded. On the waiting throng there fell a hush.
 Then Ferdy rose to greet the class, and said: "I'm glad to state
 That almost all of us are here,—that only one is late,
 For T. D. Jones is still alive, and therefore can't come down
 To join our happy gathering, and live in Charontown.
 But now it's time for speaking, and I'll call on Doctor Lee
 To speak to us on 'Life at Hopkins as it used to be.'
 On earth, before he came down here, he went to Congress twice,
 And wrote the bill prohibiting Cubans from cutting ice."

The Censor rose and shook his locks ; the room was rent with cheers,
 And Werber, eating pork frappé, came near to shedding tears.
 The Censor spoke, but what he said no one to this day knows,
 The clatter of the knives and forks so deafeningly rose.
 And then the toast-master once more resumed his constant job,
 And said : "The next in order is a speech from Doctor Kalb.
 In life, he taught psychology in College Weissnichtwo;
 Down here, he flirts with Anna Held, and runs a bank, you know."
 The toast was to "The Ladies;" Kalb said that they were peaches,
 Whose superexcellence would not be much enhanced by speeches,
 That, in the main, he thought that those who went to Woman's College
 Outshone all others in the arduous pursuit of knowledge.
 He quoted Locke, and would have had some more remarks to make,
 But just then Henry Bogue brought in a plate of Hamburg steak.
 Next was the toast "The Faculty," with Guggie to respond.
 He'd been a lawyer in the world, expert in stock and bond.
 "The Faculty," he said at length, "make up a corporation
 Which for variety is marked, and causes admiration,
 But mere descriptions don't define, of this truth I'm impressed ;
 So, if you'll have the kindness, please imagine all the rest."
 And still the merry feast went on till Knapp rose at his place;
 He was to toast "Athletics," and to praise its sphere and space.
 He'd long been a director of the famed Olympic games
 On whose lengthy lists of contest are placed so many names.
 He spoke of football and lacrosse, the "Colonel" and the cage,
 The track events of long ago, now distant by an age.
 So feeling were his brief remarks, emotion grew extreme,
 And Smull rushed to the House-Boat door, and shouted for ice-cream.
 'Twas then that Murkland took the floor; his toast was : "Tommie Ball,
 The man who ne'er forgets a name, and can remember all."
 Murkland had practiced medicine before he reached the Styx,
 His speech was from the point of view of doctors and of "sicks."
 "Amnesia is a term," he said, "we doctors sometimes use
 To mean a loss of memory, when forgetfulness accrues ;
 But such a trouble ne'er occurred to genial Thomas Ball,
 Any old name, in any tongue, was always at his call."
 Then Fosnocht rose with courtly air to answer for "The Class :
 May its name remain more lasting than works of stone and brass."
 And after he'd recounted deeds that Ninety-nine had done,
 The many points that it had scored, the prizes it had won,
 He suggested the formation, here among the House-Boat crowd,
 Of a Stygian University. With acclamations loud

They accepted his proposal, and, by general consent
He was elected to become its premier president.
The citizens were asked to make subscriptions to its stock,
And all the shares were quickly sold, both singly and in block.
“We will invest no cash,” the trustees said after their caucus,
“In stock of B. and O.”—which stands for Barathrum and Orcus.
And then the banquet was resumed, and all that tuneful choir,
The glee club, sang; and there were talks by Ross and Kurrelmeyer.
And Spilman read a paper on the Sanskrit noun-declension
Which all the hearers praised as being worthy of chief mention.
There was a moment's pause, as Chambers rose and waved his hand,
And asked for the attention of each member of the band.
He said : “Our old friend T. D. Jones will soon be with us here.
I've heard that he is on the way,—in fact, is very near ;
He lived to almost seven-score years, but will be here to-night.
If I am not mistaken you will see that I am right.”
There was a noise outside the door, and Jones came rushing in ;
The fellows grasped him by the hand, and asked him where he'd been,
And some one in the rear cried out : “Well, we are hard to beat,
For at our hundredth banquet the whole class is still complete.”

HENRY BOGUE, JR.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Assistant Manager of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Class Vice-President, '98-'99; Glee Club, '98-'99. Δ. U. Δ.

"The hoary head is a crown of glory."
"Love at two-and-twenty is a terribly intoxicating draught."
 —Ruffini.

Henry will continue his classical studies and will be elected a life member of the Patagonian Institute of Archæology. He will devote his life to an effort to prove that the natives are lineal descendents of the Homeric Greeks, but will be baffled by the non-homology of the Cyranos of the two races.

EDWARD SKIPWITH BRUCE, A. Δ. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Delegate to the Matriculate Society, '96-'97; Assistant Manager of Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '97-'98, '98-'99

"A horse, a horse, my Kingdom for a horse!"—Shakespeare.

Bruce's horoscope prophesies a checkered career. At first he will be a successful jockey at Iron Hill, next the owner of a racing stable, and then a wide-awake bookie. The astronomer looked wise and refused to say what would happen next. He admitted that disasters would result from a dark-eyed maiden's willingness to skip with Bruce.

LYTTLETON MORGAN CHAMBERS.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL

Sergeant-at-Arms, Senate, '98-'99.

"All is not Gospel that thou dost speak."—Heywood.

Chambers' course in life is clearly foreseen. He will go to the Cannibal Islands to introduce a new method of spreading the Gospel among the heathen. His method is to make his personality an integral part of all his flock, and to produce within them an insatiable desire for further instruction.

GEORGE DIUGUID DAVIDSON.

BALTIMORE.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

Alternate, House Debating Team, '97-'98; Class Poet, '98-'99; Senate Debating Team.

"Lean as a fork with the wind whistling through the prongs."

Unhappy Davidson is fated to be a statistician. We must be prepared for such startling results as this: Granted, that if each succeeding generation since Adam should stand on the shoulders of its progenitors, and, that all food had to pass up from Adam, it would now take a new-born babe 10,000 years to get its first breakfast.

HENRY CARTER DOWNES.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99."

"He is so good he would pour rose-water on a toad."

Died January 23, 1951. The distinguished lawyer and statesman, Henry Carter Downes. Mr. Downes was a member of the Class of '99 of Johns Hopkins University. He went as a young man to Hawaii, and rose rapidly, being appointed Governor in 1925. Returning to the continent thirteen years later he was a candidate for the nomination of the Liberal Party for President, but was defeated. He then retired to Baltimore.

FERDINAND COLQUHOUN FISHER, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Adviser, House Debating Team, '97-'98:

"An ass may bray a good while before he shakes the stars down."—George Eliot.

"They love least that let men know their love."—Shakespeare.

Ferd will take a long rest to recover from nervous prostration induced by hard work on the HULLABALOO staff. Then he will study theology, but will soon give this up to become a humorous lecturer. Soon he will gravitate naturally to a congenial place on the variety stage. From time to time he will undertake various ambitious literary works which he will never finish, among them an elaborate effort to prove his descent from Glaucus, a tribune in Agrippa's army. He will eventually die of over-work.

FREDERICK BONNER FLINN.

WORCESTER, MASS.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

"Patient, simple and childlike."—Longfellow.

1910, A. D.—Flinn has pursued his experiments with electricity, and obtained excellent results. He has lately invented a method of galvanizing potato-bugs, so that they render valuable aid to the growth of plants, instead of being a bane as heretofore. He is about to be appointed chief electrocutor of New York State.

WALTER MELVIN FOOKS.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Sergeant-at-Arms, House of Representatives, '97-'98; Vice-President of Senate, '98-'99.

"Very like a whale."—Shakespeare.

Two years after graduation Fooks will be doing good service on the Baltimore police force. He will subdue refractory prisoners by sitting on them, a very effective process. He will be promoted several times and will finally be elected to the City Council. He will be recognized as a well-rounded, solid man.

CHARLES ELIAS FORD, JR., Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

MATHEMATICAL-PHYSICAL.

"Oh, he was dressed in his Sunday best!"

Charles will have a checkered career. He will be in turn an artist, a poet, a politician. For some years he will be a fireman, and will advance from pipeman to chief of a division. Then he will get back into politics and will follow Gorman's footsteps, reaching the Senate just in time to be overwhelmed by the Woman's Suffrage movement.

EDDY BURKE FOSNOCHT.

BALTIMORE.

MODERN-LANGUAGES.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Class Secretary, '96-'97; Class Historian, '97-'98; Class Executive Committee, '97-'98.

"Sweet smoke of rhetoric."

Eddy is doomed to a scholastic career. He will be fossilized by a three-year post-graduate course, and teach in the following institutions successively: Tuskegee Normal Institute, Bryn Mawr Preparatory School, Carlisle Indian School, and University of Delaware. He will end his days as president of the latter.

SIMON WALTER FRANK.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

'Varsity Track Team, '97-'98.

"Remote, unfriendly, solitary, slow."—Goldsmith.

Frank has his eye on Rudyard Kipling's shoes. He will make the acquaintance of the cold, cold world as a reporter on the New York Journal, and will have a brilliant career, until he is sent by his paper to Afghanistan as correspondent for the Anglo-Russian war. He will die of heart failure while under fire in a war balloon.

JOHN CALVIN FRENCH, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Editor-in-Chief of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Hopkins Scholar, '96-'97; Honorary Hopkins Scholar, '97-'98, '98-'99; Class Executive Committee, '96-'97, '97-'98; Speaker of the House, '97-'98; Editor of News Letter, '97-'98; House Debating Team; Editor-in-Chief News Letter, '98-'99 (resigned); Senior Class President; Recording Secretary Y. M. C. A., '98-'99; Class Historian, '96-'97; Senate Debating Team.

*"The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head."*—Pope.

French is a teacher. Failing to obtain the presidency of Harvard University, he gravitated to the South, and is now (1923 A. D.) engaged in teaching Latin and Greek to the dusky youths of a country district. He will try to hold his position, but there is grave danger that he will be dismissed on account of incompetency.

CHARLES CARTER GADDESS, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL

Class Executive Committee, '98-'99.

"I am not yet so bald that you can see my brains."

Gaddess, proving unfortunate in business, will soon find himself in reduced circumstances. By acting as the "I don't" part of a hair restorer ad., he will maintain himself until his fortunes mend. Then he will rise rapidly, and will be elected Governor of Maryland in 1915. He will thus be instrumental in getting a State appropriation of half a million a year for Hopkins.

JOHN REED GEMMILL, Φ. Γ. Δ.

YORK, PA.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Executive Committee, '96-'97; Class Treasurer, '98-'99.

"Be sober, be vigilant."

By his quiet and dignified demeanor John will acquire a reputation for learning, and will receive an appointment on the Faculty of the Woman's College. He will hold this position for some years, until, being asked by the trustees to give up smoking, John will indignantly refuse, and will leave. He will then go into politics, and will reach his highest fame as Mayor of York, Pa.

HARRY SELIGER GREENBAUM.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Honorary Hopkins Scholar, '97-'98, '98-'99; Adviser Senate Debating Team.

"That sovereign bliss, a wife."—Mallett.

"I am Sir Oracle."

Greenbaum will study law. He will be very successful in criminal cases on account of a highly developed ability to talk a jury into a state of nervous collapse. His voluminous notes on the Dean's course will be published by the McMillan Co. in 1905 with comments. This will be the beginning of a productive literary career. A large quarto on "My Impressions of Things in General" will settle all hitherto disputed points in the scientific world.

ROBERT HAROLD GRIMES,  $\Phi. \Gamma. \Delta.$

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Business Manager of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Business Manager News Letter, '97-'98, '98-'99; Manager Lacrosse Team (Intercollegiate Champions), '97-'98; Master of Ceremonies, '99 Feed; Toastmaster Junior Banquet; Delegate to Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association, '98-'99; Delegate to Maryland Intercollegiate A. A., '98-'99; Class Delegate to J. H. U. A. A. '98-'99; Mandolin Club, '96-'97; Speaker Pro tem. House, '97-'98; President Senate, '98-'99; Alternate, House Debating Team; Freshman Class President (resigned),  $\Delta. U. \Delta.$

"A joke is a very serious thing."—Churchill.

Grimes will begin to study law, but will be led away by a seductive offer to assume the business management of a company for the manufacture of automobile roller skates. He will resign this to continue his career as a promoter in other fields with undiminished enthusiasm. He will find time for some literary diversions, and will win fame by a spirited monograph, entitled "One Hundred Proofs that Pope was a Poet."

CLARENCE MAURICE GUGGENHEIMER.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, '96-'97, '97-'98 (Intercollegiate Champions); 'Varsity Foot Ball Team, '97-'98, '98-'99; House Debating Team; Class Relay Team, '96-'97; 'Varsity Track Team, '96-'97; Class Executive Committee, '96-'97; Senate Debating Team.

"His words were so hot, they melted the fillings of his teeth."

"Guggie" will return to the University for a special course in French elective, drawing and general athletics. There is a blank of several years about which the spirits will reveal nothing. From this period he will emerge a changed man. He will never indulge in slang or strong expletives, and will abhor all games of chance. The Rathskeller, even under Mullen's administration, will have no attraction for him. He will amass a large fortune, and endow the Guggenheimer Professorship in French at Johns Hopkins.

HUGH SISSON HANNA, B. O. II.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

"Let me sleep on, and do not wake me yet."

It is impossible to say what will become of Hanna in the first five years after graduation. After that time he will go on the stage, and will be most successful as the villain in heavy tragedy. His stage name will be Hugh Sisson, and it will be some time before the '99 alumni will discover his identity. He will lose his life in an accident on the underground pneumatic railway in Sitka, Alaska.

LOUIS WARDLAW HASKELL, JR., A. Δ. Φ. SAVANNAH, GA.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class Treasurer, '96-'97; 'Varsity Football Team, '97-'98; 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, '97-'98 (Intercollegiate Champions).

"A stout young man with a volcanic voice."

Haskell will return to his native heath, where he will invent a method of electrically stimulating the growth of cotton plants. This will bring him a large fortune, which he will spend industriously. He will run for Congress from his native State, and by virtue of his "bar'l" will at once become prominent. Later in life he will be unfortunate, and will conduct a commencement oration bureau for a living.

"The law pays no attention to little things."—Bacon.

Tiberius will coquette for some time with the Boston and Baltimore Baseball Teams, but will finally consent to play with the home club. He will be the darling of the bleachers. In the winter he will give elocutionary entertainments in the country districts. His oration, "Cataline!!!"—etc., will become a national classic.

LEON LEWIS JOYNER.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

'Varsity Baseball Team, '96-'97. '97-'98, Captain, '98-'99; Class Executive Committee, '98-'99.

"A hit, a very palpable hit."

We hesitate to reveal the sad fate that awaits Leon. He will be disappointed in love, and, becoming an enemy to society, will soon be known as a dangerous criminal. His greatest success will be in picking pockets. Later in life he will reform and will make a very efficient police marshal.

KARL JUNGBLUTH, JR., A. Δ. Φ.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Secretary and Treasurer, '95-'96; Glee Club, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Leader of the Glee Club, '98-'99.

"The best musical instruments are made from the jawbone of an ass."—Voltaire.

Karl will sing, whether in a minstrel show or comic opera, we can't tell. When his voice fails he will go to the newly discovered gold fields of Greenland, where he will be attacked by a polar bear, but will sing a college song, and the bear will go away. He will return with a large hoard of dust.

MARION JUNGBLUTH, A. Δ. Φ.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Toastmaster Freshman Banquet; Class Executive Committee, '95-'96.

"A bold, bad man."—Spenser.

Marion will accept a position with the Gossamer Face Powder Co. While experimenting in their laboratory he will discover an antidote for the liquor habit. This, together with No-to-bac, will be manufactured by a gigantic trust, which will be operated in Louisville and Milwaukee. This will solve the temperance problem and make reform unnecessary. For this service a bronze statue of Marion will be erected by his admirers.

JOHN ALBERT KALB.

CATONSVILLE.

LATIN-MATHEMATICAL.

Class Executive Committee, '95-'96; Recording Secretary Y. M. C. A., '96; Second Vice-President, Y. M. C. A., '97; Class Secretary, '97-'98.

"He will be handsome when his face comes into fashion."

"Nature cast his face into a mold uncommon."

The fame of this great man will extend to the bounds of Catonsville. And some one will say, "Who is this man?" Then the world will make reply, "This is he who has come out of great tribulation and has passed his exams.; he has even taken his degree, and he has his reward, for he shall share the Kingdom of Latin with 'King Kirby' at 'Tom' Hopkins for ever and ever."

ALBERT KEIDEL,  $\Phi$ .  $\Gamma$ .  $\Delta$ .

CATONSVILLE.

LATIN-MATHEMATICAL.

"He took a pull at the small beer."—Confucius.

Bert will go into the real estate business in the neighborhood of Catonsville, and will boom the suburbs industriously. He will be led into speculation in stocks, in which he will be unfortunate. This will drive him to drink. Eventually a Baltimore heiress will marry him to reform him, and Bert's latter days will be happy and peaceful.

JOHN HENDRICKEN KING, A.  $\Delta$ .  $\Phi$ .

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Editor News Letter, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Track Team, '96-'97, '97-'98; Glee Club, '96-'97; Manager Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '98-'99; Adviser, House Debating Team; Adviser, Senate Debating Team; Class Executive Committee, '98-'99;  $\Delta$ . U.  $\Delta$ .

"O for a thousand tongues to sing."

"I's wicked, I is; I's mighty wicked."

"Do everybody before they do you."

John will become great and handsome (?), and will wear diamonds (paste). He will go on the vaudeville stage and do turns as the greatest living descriptive baritone. On account of his marvelous ability to do everybody, he will be promoted to the management of the Tutti Frutti Music Hall Scrub Glee Club. He will spend his summers at Narragansett, where he will pose as the greatest lady-killer of his age. He will be disappointed in love and die a bachelor.

GEORGE WROTH KNAPP, JR., B. O. II.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

'Varsity Relay Team, '96-'97, '97-'98; Class Relay Team, '96-'97; 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, '96-'97, '97-'98 (Intercollegiate Champions); 'Varsity Track Team, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Holder of 'Varsity and State Records for 35-yd., 100-yd. and 220-yd. Dashes; Class President, '97-'98; Delegate to Intercollegiate A. A. of Md., '97-'98, '98-'99; Class Delegate to J. H. U. A. A., '97-'98; Athletic Editor News Letter, '98-'99.

"More haste, less speed."

Wearied by his placid environment, George will enlist in the army for service in the Philippines. In his first skirmish his sprinting abilities will stand him in good stead. He will retire as a Major, and will be prominent in the Westport Athletic Club.

WALTER MARSHALL KRAGER.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Banjo Club, '96-'97, '97-'98; Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '98-'99; Toastmaster Senior Dinner.

"This I know, I love to play."

Krager will take post-graduate work in French and athletics under Dr. Keidel. His thesis will be "How to Learn French without Studying it." He will then accept a position in the Berlitz School, where he will introduce his methods.

HERMAN KURRELMEYER.

BALTIMORE.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

Hopkins Scholar, '96-'97; Honorary Hopkins Scholar, '97-'98, '98-'99.

"Entreats that his indistinct statement of preposterous reasons may be taken for understood."

Kurry will continue aggressively to mind his own business. He will teach school in Baltimore, and will publish voluminous critical works, which will fail for lack of advertisement. He will always prize highly a large leather medal, the gift of his classmates in recognition of his devotion to '99.

MAURICE LAZENBY, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

'Varsity Football Team, '97-'98, '98-'99.

"Silence is the perfectest herald of joy."

After taking his degree, in 1900 or later, Maurice will study medicine in the new Catonsville Medical College. He will take a special course on the nervous system, and, becoming much interested, will devote his life to an attempt to overturn existing theories about the functions of the corpus pituitarium.

JOSHUA LEVERING, JR., A. Δ. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Class Vice-President, '95-'96; Toastmaster, Class Banquet, '95-'96; Recording Secretary, Y. M. C. A., '96-'97; Chairman Class Executive Committee, '97-'98; Second Vice-President, Y. M. C. A., '98-'99; Manager Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '97-'98, '98-'99 (resigned); Banjo Club, '95-'96, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Δ. U. Δ.

"Past praying for."—Shakespeare.

Josh will travel extensively in Europe immediately after graduation. After a brief stay at Monte Carlo he will return in the steerage, sadder and wiser, but will resume his old smile soon after landing. From this time on he will have a brilliant career in local politics, and will eventually be appointed governor of one of the South American dependencies of the Republic, where he will be the idol of the natives.

PHILIP SIDNEY MORGAN, Φ. Γ. Δ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99" (resigned); Hopkins Scholar, '96-'97, '97-'98; House Debating Team; Class Executive Committee, '96-'97.

"Has any man seen him at the barber's?"

Morgan will continue his studies in hypnotism with much success, cultivating a long growth of hair and a wild glance of the eye. His scientific enthusiasm will lead him into many adventures. He will try the effect of hypnotic suggestion on a Rocky Mountain bear, and will be rescued in a disorganized condition. He will meet Smull, now an accomplished pianist, and the two will tour the country together, giving entertainments. When the crowds are unsympathetic each will blame the other.

JAMES MORFIT MULLEN, Φ. Κ. Ψ.

BALTIMORE.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Hopkins Scholar, '96-'97; 'Varsity Relay Team, '96-'97, '97-'98; Class Relay Team, '96-'97; 'Varsity Track Team, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Captain Relay Team, '97-'98; Acting Captain Track Team, '97-'98; Captain Track Team, '98-'99 (resigned); 'Varsity Football Team, '97-'98, '98-'99; Class Vice-President, '97-'98; Holder State and 'Varsity Record for quarter-mile.

"I shall always be a kid."

Mullen will enter a broker's office, and will rise rapidly. He will retain his interest in athletics, and will donate a number of medals for Hopkins athletes. A failure in business will prevent further generosity, and he will conduct the Rathskeller with much success, until it is raided by the temperance societies. He will then emigrate in disgust, and will eventually reach a position of affluence in New Zealand.

PHILIP AUSTEN MURKLAND.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Assistant Manager, "HULLABALOO '99;" Senate Debating Team, '98-'99; House Debating Team, '97-'98.

"The coat makes the man."—Erasmus.

Murkland will go West and espouse the Populist cause. He will wear a long overcoat with much effect, and will give up his political views to marry an heiress. The marriage will prove unfortunate. His unparalleled nerve will attract the attention of a large business house, and they will put him in charge of their traveling salesmen in Thibet. He will finally enlist in the Thibetan army, and will be killed by eating embalmed beef.

CHARLES MALLORY REMSEN, A. Δ. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

GEOLOGICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class Executive Committee, '95-'96; Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '95-'96, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; House Debating Team; Track Team, '97-'98; Manager Track Team, '98-'99 (resigned); Δ. U. Δ.

"Thy countenance proclaims thee a wine-bibber."

"He must drink no wine who would keep his secrets."

"My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

Charlie will devote himself to booze and chemistry, principally booze. He will amuse himself in his spare hours by sundry trips to Cambridge, on which occasions the "inseparable" will accompany him to soothe his spirit with the "Washington Post" a la Sousa. He will in course of time be snatched from his erring ways by a Caroline street belle, who was fascinated by his playing at a Hopkins concert, and they will live happy (?) ever afterwards.

LAWRENCE ANTON REYMANN.

WHEELING, W. VA.

HISTORICAL-POLITICAL.

Editor of the "HULLABALOO '99;" Advisor, Senate Debating Team; Lieutenant, Hopkins Company, '98.

"It follows not because the hair is rough the dog is a savage one."—Knowles.

Reymann, after preliminary studies at the Shaftesbury School of Expression, will chase the tragic muse around the stage to the tune of "Dinah, the Moon am Shinin'." He will achieve instantaneous success in "Love and a Bottle," particularly with the bottle. After being compelled to retire from the stage, he will attach himself to the Sioux Reservation, where he will teach the chiefs how to persuade Uncle Sam not to encroach upon their lands. In consequence, the Sioux Indians will erect a snow image of him every winter for ten generations, and will remember him as the "Man Heap Talker."

GEORGE CANBY ROBINSON, A. Δ. Φ.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class President, '95-'96, '96-'97; 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, '96-'97, Captain of 'Varsity Lacrosse Team, '97-'98 (Intercollegiate Champions), '98-'99 (resigned); Secretary and Treasurer of the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association, '97-'98, Vice-President, '98-'99; 'Varsity Football Team, '95-'96, Captain, '97-'98, '98-'99; Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, '95-'96, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Glee Club, '96-'97, '97-'98, '98-'99; Class Delegate to the Athletic Association, '96-'97, '97-'98; Class Executive Committee, '96-'97; Δ. U. Δ.

"Ye auburn locks, ye golden curls."

Canby will apply for admission to the Hopkins Medical School, but will finally go to the Baltimore Medical College. He will practice medicine in the Philippines, where he will be a prominent society leader. From here he will elope with a daughter of Aguinaldo to Siam, and will soon become prime minister of that country. A revolution will finally cost him his head.

WILLIAM LEAVELL ROSS.

HEDGESVILLE, W. VA.

CLASSICAL.

Adviser, House Debating Team; Woodyear Scholar, '97-'98.

"A singular, angular fellow."

Seized with an ambition to compass the whole field of knowledge, Ross will read Plato and Aristotle for three weeks after graduation. Then he will grow weary and try French novels. Finally he will conclude not to startle the world, and will then make a most excellent school teacher in his native State.

MILTENBERGER NEALE SMULL.

BALTIMORE.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

Glee Club, '98-'99.

"I was the first fellow who ever spoke in the J. H. U. House of Representatives."

"Sweet girl graduates."

Smull will immediately learn crocheting and art needle-work, and will be a frequent prize-winner in the Timonium Fairs. He will marry a strong-minded belle of Sparrows Point, to whom he will always be a loving and obedient husband.

EDWIN ALBERT SPILMAN.

BALTIMORE.

CLASSICAL.

Class Executive Committee, '97-'98; Editor News Letter, '97-'98; Hopkins Scholar, '97-'98; Honorary Scholar, '98-'99; Class Historian, '98-'99; Secretary of Senate, '98-'99.

"His bald head shone like a calcium light just before it explodes."—Peck.

Will take a course of special research as to the influence of Xenophon upon the literature of the Chickasaw Indians. After receiving his Ph.D. in this subject, he will be given the title of LL.D. on account of a pamphlet on "The Life and Works of Billy Stewart, the Celebrated Chemist." Will then return to alma mater as instructor in the department of Polynesian Languages. Will become very popular with the citizens, and will succeed in having the name of the Woman's College changed to Jane Hopkins College, for which he will be awarded a gold medal by the Legislature.

GEORGE LANE TANEYHILL, JR., B. O. II.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Glee Club, '98-'99; Class Executive Committee, '98-'99.

"I have found you an argument; I am not obliged to find you an understanding."—Dr. Johnson.

Will become famous as the discoverer of stearo-butyro-palmo-ortho-saponaceous acid, and will introduce it as a remedy for heart failure brought on by breathing hydrogen sulphide. Will give lectures on his discovery at the Porto Rican Institute of Veterinary Surgery, but after furnishing an argument for the Porto Ricans will be unable to supply them with understandings. Will then turn his attention to the psychology of the abnormal gorilla, and become director of a psychological laboratory for the treatment of gorillas and chimpanzees in the Congo Free State.

RENÉ TAVEAU.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

*"Turn, turn, my wheel! Turn round and round,
Without a pause, without a sound;
So spins the flying world away."*

—Longfellow.

Will become such an expert at bicycling that he will make his living by pedaling Tommie B—1 down to the University every morning, while Tommie sits on the handle bars and rests. Will then have a bicycle attachment put on to Dr. Rowland's multiplex telegraph to make it work faster. Will finally become President of the League of American Wheelmen, and will win great distinction by beating a horse-car in a two-hundred-yard dash.

RICHARD HENRY THOMAS.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

"Every way of a man is right in his own eyes"—Prov.

Thomas will continue the lumber business of a distant relative, now deceased, in Maine. His nights will be spent in searching books of heraldry for the missing link between his escutcheon (a fir cone on a field of silver) and that of the Earl of Southampton. Late in life he will discover the link, but just as he receives acknowledgment from England that he is the rightful heir to three hundred million pounds, he will die—of fright.

OTTOMAR SIEGMUND WERBER.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

"Oaths are but words, words are but wind."

Werber will immediately start out barefoot on a pedestrian tour across the continent. He says if he can accomplish this before September 1, that Madge Lessing has promised to love him. He will not reach San Fran., however, until September 2, on account of difficulties in crossing Utah. Now thoroughly disgusted with women in general, he will spend the rest of his life in 'Cisko trying the Samson act with the Golden Gate.

ARTHUR WRIGHT., K. A.

BALTIMORE.

CHEMICAL-BIOLOGICAL.

Class Treasurer, '97-'98.

"In short measures, life may perfect be."

Wright will accept a position with the Nicaragua Canal Company, and, while shoveling gravel, will unearth a pot of gold buried by an Indian chief. He will at once flirt gravel for Baltimore, where he will live sumptuously for two years. Then he will become a motorman for the Maxim Aeroplane Corporation on the cloud route between Baltimore and New York. He will be killed by collision with a meteor.

JAMES DE LANCY VER PLANCK.

FISHKILL, N. Y.

MATHEMATICAL—PHYSICAL.

"Get thee to a nunnery, go."—Shakespeare.

"Her voice was ever soft, gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman."

Ver Planck will take the agency for Juniper Tar, and will peddle it through York State clad in a pair of gum boots and a corduroy hat, expounding his principles of election reform to every buyer (who will listen). He will become Alderman of Fishkill, probably through the influence of cartoons in the New York Journal. After this, he will no longer sell Juniper Tar, but will devote his whole attention to stamping out every trace of Tammany and Plattism within the State.

HISTORY OF '99

I sing the praise of battles,
Of conflicts dire and bloody,
Of heroes who fought in the lists
In the depths of red-bricked McCoy;
Of limbs that were scattered profusely,
Of scalps that were lost in the fray;
Of staunch Green and White,
Which remained e'er in right,
And ever won the day.

—Pindar, Ode XIII.

IT HAS BEEN CUSTOMARY FOR CLASS HISTORIANS to use inordinate praise in writing the annals of their classes, and to expatiate on their glory and valor, et cetera. Yea, verily, they show no hesitancy whatever in going on a wild-goose chase for occurrences that never came to pass, and have not the slightest compunction about falsifying facts which would otherwise detract from the exalted position in which they have placed themselves. Most of them belong to the class which Lucian designates as “having fashioned a lie well known to all.” In view of these facts, true historians become indignant, and the fault is not to be laid at their door, if they persist in pointing out the spirit of truth which encompasses their monuments to posterity. The historian of this class may, therefore, be pardoned if he ventures to say that the method employed in writing this history will be a departure from the pseudo-authentic method employed hitherto, and that the history will contain only such facts as have been truthfully recorded.

It is not through inadvertence that the Class of Ninety-nine contains the members it now has. I refer the Freshmen to the law of Sufficient Reason. Mademoiselle Lachesis—or was it Madame?—and her fellow-spinners knew what they were about when they so spun their fateful webs, that less fortunate beings should not be included. It is not in vain that Pythagoras thought the number nine the emblem of justice; nor is it without significance that there were nine Muses and nine Worthies. These facts show conclusively that the bearers of the celebrated nine were cut out far above the average mortal. And had not Tarquinius Superbus, in his gross stupidity, refused to buy the first six Sibylline books, it would not have devolved upon the historian to show the superiority of this class.

In 1895, the University authorities put the undergraduate work on a strictly collegiate basis by adding the sub-freshman year, and it remained for the Class of Ninety-nine to make it a success. Thirteen members entered, and an organization was effected. The class contributed, in this year, many of its members to the musical and athletic clubs; but no hand was taken in the battles-royal, as we were still novices in this part of the University curriculum. We were, nevertheless, well initiated in the good old customs of our alma mater, and had the pleasure of seeing a certain Freshman, Die-von-Bach, hoisted up on one of the rafters of the gym, and his rather swift aerial passage when the pleasure-loving instinct of the harbinger of peace brought this worthy nigh.

In the fall of '96, the larger body of the class entered and increased the number to forty-five. Peace and good-will toward the Juniors reigned for a while. But gradually there arose a friction between the two classes, which daily caused the blood to course more quickly through the body. Finally, when both bodies had become white-hot, the locker-room witnessed a glorious conflagration, which did not a little injury to the Juniors, and seemed to ruffle their haughty spirits. This encounter put a damper on their enthusiasm, and caused them to keep in the background for a while. But hark! what woeful import has this murmur that is heard? Oh, Ninety-nine, for shame! How could you stoop to so cruel a deception? Was it not sufficient for you that the Juniors felt their remorse deeply for not escorting you to the banquet-hall, that you must send them telegrams deploring their lack of politeness? Fie! (Pardon this outburst of the historian.)

The scene is changed; it is the time of the Junior banquet. Not even the proverbial vigilance of Baltimore's police force could have exceeded that of Ninety-nine. The strategists of the class had a consultation, and laid several snares for the unsuspecting Juniors to good effect. The banjo virtuoso was captured and spirited away to Mayor Kalb's borough. Once here, the generals relaxed their watchfulness, and the prisoner escaped. Nothing daunted, the class marched en masse to the hotel with the idea of assisting at the ceremonies. A gentlemanly altercation arose, which could not be subdued by even the blue-coated minions of law, and, for the time being, Ares held full sway. There were, after this gentle dispute, several friendly encounters, but the year closed with the flag of truce waving on high.

In the spring of '97, a private theatrical took place, in which Freshies Glaser, Gminder and Schermerhorn,—the latter, by the way, thinks that Paris couldn't have held a candle to him—gave evidence of their histrionic talents. To show our appreciation of their brilliant performance, we bedecked them with our class colors—rather thickly, to be sure—and anointed them with the oil of Pabst. Thereupon, thinking it a transgression of the duty we owed to the public, if we should keep them from view, we generously turned them loose.

In the fall of '97, it was soon seen that nothing less than a social contest of strength would satisfy the Freshmen. Accordingly, plans were laid, and the bout took place. Ye gods and little fishes! What material for a Pindaric ode! The air became resonant with harmonious shouts, whose dissonance far exceeded anything Pythagoras ever conceived. "Get the deuce off of me!" "Anybody seen my sole?" "That's my hat-band!" "No, that's Billy's molar!" Honor the battle they fought, treasure the limbs that were lost, nobly contested!

When the time for our annual banquet arrived, two of our members, who were especially daring, were captured and taken to one of the palatial residences on the banks of the Back, from which they were rescued by the Pinkertonians of the class. Hostilities were in full sway, when the Faculty, solicitous for the welfare of their protégés, stepped in and interdicted further manifestations of friendly feeling, and kidnapping. Placards were sent all over the city, and a new era in Johns Hopkins life can be dated from this period. My readers will pardon my apotheosizing this event.

Farewell, bright days of hazing,
We'll ne'er see you again.
Although it's quite amazing,
It's a fact, at least, pro tem.

I cannot bring the records of this year to a close without making a reference to the Public Debate. The cataract style of the cotton-bale orator of the Zodiac seemed to have put the judges in a state of hypnotic irresponsibility, and to have caused them to render a decision which the more enlightened of the audience ridiculed. We accepted the inevitable, however, with good grace, knowing that it was only a pyrrhic victory. This year also saw a civil war in our ranks—rather Hullabalooistic in its nature—but difficulties were smoothed over, and we stand, as before—one heart, one hand.

In this, our graduating year, a different atmosphere surrounds us. We now look back with a superior smile upon our doings as Juniors and Freshmen, and turn our attention to the future. What our friend Lachesis has in store for us cannot be known; but the historian has made a special study of autohoroscopy, and has in this way cheated the Fates.

The result of his study is here appended. Murkland shows a decided tendency for the elite with a much-bepadded Haymarket coat. M. Jungbluth will in all probability follow in the footsteps of the Dean, and is even now electrifying the surrounding atmosphere by his psychological outbursts. Levering, Robinson, and Krager have a musical vein, and have also developed a strong liking for circuses. Fisher will wrestle with the mysteries that enshroud Balaam's ass, ably seconded by Chambers. Fook's future, as chairman of the Test-Tube Club, a society organized for research in the properties of spirituous liquids, is assured. K. Jungbluth will take a course in "How to give anything but the right pitch at concerts." I cannot forbear making mention of the Sophocles Club, of which Bogue is the chief exponent. Kalb, the prolific letter writer will in all probability reside in Paris, whither he is drawn by motives wholly inexplicable to any one save himself. Kurrelmeyer and Davidson are of a pedantic turn of mind, and the views of Smull have advanced far beyond the embryonic state. And last but not least, the modern Gracchus looks askance at the position now held by Speaker Reed.

Before bidding farewell to his readers, the historian would like to add that, although the deeds achieved by this class will live by virtue of their own greatness, and need not the perpetuation of history, still the course of events cannot be foreseen, and there may be a time when radicalism may conquer, and rather illiterate beings will be admitted into the Union,—and in case this should happen, it will be essential that the history of this class be recorded.

To Naughty-Naught.

A Board Meeting and a Class History.

"Thereby hangs a tale."

HOW IT HAPPENED, dear reader, that I was under the table at a memorable meeting of the Board of Collegiate Advisers, in the merry month of March, is, as my friend Kipling would say, "Another story." What concerns us both now, and mightily concerned me then is, What went on! Without further ado, let me drop into my story, and be done with it.

While I was arranging myself with great caution, and as comfortably as my fear of discovery would allow, I was wonderfully moved by the fine voice of Dr. Scurvy Smeeth leading in prayer. Following upon a sonorous "Amen," in which the Dean joined with fervor, and with the rapping of the President's gavel directly over my head, came the announcement, which set all my senses a-tingling, that this special meeting was for the purpose of passing in review a year's history of the Class of Naughty-naught. If I had any compunctions of conscience at the part of eavesdropper I was to play, I consoled myself with the counsel of Ecclesiasticus, "Miss not the discourse of the elders."

It is a matter of note that the hazing of Freshmen is a thing of the past. In its stead has come a settlement of those slight differences of opinion, and of caste, on the gridiron.

"Dean," smiled the President, "tell us about it."

"No," said the Dean. "I defer to the collegiate professor of Clearness, Force, and Ease; an eye-witness and a sportsman, he will give us an impartial and glowing account."

I looked through the forest of legs by which I was surrounded for a pair of "high-waters" to move out, and for the soft, modulated tones of Doctor Spinnach.

"It was my good fortune," began the Doctor, "one raw day in December, to have happened in at Electric Park. (There were audible sounds of mirth about the table.) To my great delight I found two lusty sets of youths lined up on the gridiron. A closer examination proved them to be none other than elevens from the Junior and Freshman classes. 'Ah, Spinnach,' says I, 'here's an afternoon's sport.' At the center of the Junior line I recognized Junk Smith—'His eyen stepe, and rollinge in his heed.' At guard, Bill Breed and Lindey; for tackles, Reddy Bouchelle and Dutchy

Beeuuwwkes; Kriss Clarke and Otsey Glaser held the ends, while back of the line were Shorty Spencer, Buck Wirt and Abby; at full-back stood the Juniors' tower of strength, Ike Bull:

. . . . 'A stout carl, for the nones
Ful big he was of braun, and eek of bones;
He was short-sholdred, brood, a thikke knarre,
Ther was no dore that he nolde heve of harre,
Or breke it, at a renning, with his heed.'

"But, gentlemen, such fumbling! The ball is Naughty-naught's on their ten-yard line. (A long pause, and I knew the Professor had his finger in his mouth. It is a way he has.) A signal, and see! the man Bull is off, with the pigskin snugly tucked in his arm. The field strings out behind him. In the wind trails the tail of his jersey. Ten more yards and he will be safe for a touchdown. But now a Freshman is clawing the air. Why, sir, his hands are on that flying shirt. Thud! The snorting Bull is sprawling in the mud! A game lost by ten yards! Wrong, sir! Lost by six inches of jersey!"

(The Doctor quite outshone himself in this vivid narration, and I squinted up to see, as I had suspected, that his necktie was slowly working its way up past his ears.)

"I will not detain you," he resumed, "with a recital of the varying fortunes of this game; how they rolled each other in the mud, as if candidates for a potter's wheel; how two halves resulted without a score; and then from 'the thin red line' of the Juniors, a ringing challenge for a third. It was too much! The weary, worn Freshmen cried, 'Hold! Enough!' and therewith were they 'damned!'"

When the round of applause had subsided, the "high-waters" came under the table again, and the President called on Thomas Ball to bring in "Jim."

"He will tell us the story of the rest of this day," said the Doctor, "and 'Jim' is a very dependable witness." We shall see.

"Well, suh, uncle, Ize mighty sorry dey's done away wif de pot-social. Dat I understan'. Dis yer broom-cane rush ain't in my line. But to come to de pint, suh. You see, when dem boys come in f'om de game, dey dess sutney was spilin' fo' each uthas. I made up my min' right dah dat sumthin' was a goin' fer to drap in dat gymgasium, en dat berry ebenin'. En, suh, jess ez I suspec', one of dem debbilish Seniors who was a layin' fo' to seed em Juniors get into trouble—since dey ain't fergit dat little affair ob der own las' spring—ez I say, suh, one of dem Seniors git 'isself a broom, an' den he challenge all de Freshmans an' Juniors fo' to come out in de cage. Nex', suh, he made 'em line up opposite to de utha, frow dat broom up in de middle, and say 'Hi!' Den, 'fo' de Lor', dey sutney was a mixin' up. It wasn't perzackly a pot-social, suh, kaze dat's 'gainst de rules. But it come, I spec', jus' about as neah to it ez de rules allow.

Den dat Senior say, 'Hi!' agin, an' he mek em git up an' count de han's what's on de broom, an' dey was ten Juniors, suh, an' thirteen Freshmans. Now, suh, I gone count dem boys 'fo' de beginin' an' dey was perzackly twenty-sumpthin' Juniors an', I reckon, suh, 'bout t'ree hunderd Freshmans. Dat's it, suh. 'So,' sez I, 'Jim, you gib dat decision to de Juniors.' Now, suh, Mr. Pres'dent," Jim concluded, squaring himself off, "Ef dey's any man what 'sputes it, now's de time fo' to settle de mattah!"

He had made a great hit, and in the applause that followed I heard some one saying:

"J-j-jim, you are as goo-goo-good as a go-go-go-goat!"

Dr. Shrubwood announced that he had a clipping from a morning paper, date of February 14, which he thought would prove of interest. I took pains at a later day to secure the same for this account, for this is what the Doctor read:

The man who was fortunate enough to reach home last night was well content to hug his fireplace, while the blizzard outside howled itself hoarse, and piled up the snow in marvelous drifts that put an end to all traffic. But Hopkins' Juniors are made of sterner stuff. As they no longer have the Freshmen to fight, they fought with the blizzard. When they reached the hotel, they wanted to fight the proprietor. It was a memorable Monday night. Those Juniors had come a long way; they had ploughed through snowdrifts up to their necks; they were cold, and they were hungry.

Mon Dieu! What was this? The proprietor of this respectable hostelry had never so much as heard of a Junior Banquet! Was he sorry? He did not seem so. Perhaps he was thinking of blizzard prices for terrapin and ducks. No! it would be impossible for him to entertain the company. The steward, with whom the committee had treated, was ill. They expostulated, they damned, they turned all the colors of the spectrum in their wrath, but to no avail. Had they not in person arranged the menu with the steward, ordered covers for thirty-five, and that very afternoon received confirming word by telephone? A hungry Junior, glowering through the lobby, laconically summed up the situation: "Rennert! Rot!" What could they do but wipe their feet on the hotel mat, and hie their way to Father Shannon at The Carrollton. In an hour they sat down to a dinner. There was no terrapin, there was no duck, no patties of sweetbread, but there was solid com——

At this point I moved over on the President's corns. There was something of a stir. And then——

Dear reader, the remainder of that meeting was of a very personal character.

Let me draw the curtain! That threadbare old curtain.

The History of Naughty-One.

THERE "GOT INTO" THE HOPKINS UNIVERSITY in the fall of '98 a Freshman class yclept the Class of Naughty-one, whose glory far outshone and whose renown far outreached the glory and renown of all its predecessors. It is not necessary to say how they "got in." Let us, then, pass over the anxious perspiration and the many painful struggles with coaches, examiners and kindred evils which they endured to obtain the privilege of perpetrating Latin, Greek and German exercises; chemical, biological and phy-phy-physical experiments; and other outrages.

These Freshmen were distinguished from other people by all the eminently respectable virtues and a few excellent vices; but, above all, were they noticeable for their freshness. This quality they exhibited in a marked degree immediately upon entering the University. They spoke of the revered professors in those tones of familiar affection generally employed by persons desiring to borrow money; they swaggered around the trophy room, where, regally they spat and smoked and fearsomely they swore; they innocently subscribed to Lee's Syllabus; and patronized, extensively, though unnecessarily, the barber shop. Nor has the lustre of their verdancy as yet been entirely worn off. The Juniors tried hard to reform them, but were physically incapable of the job; for twice, upon set occasions, with hard endeavor, they tried conclusions with the Naughty-ones, and twice were they so belabored and beaten withal that they did even desist from their charitable intentions, and decided to grow a bit before making a third attempt. Though it's dangerous to boast, I cannot resist giving a brief account of two glorious Freshman victories.

Our honored Faculty and Dean decreed that this year the annual Freshman-Junior fistications and similar pleasantries should cease; whereupon the Freshmen and Juniors organized an inter-class football game—no more favorable pretext for trouble presenting itself. The Freshman eleven rolled the Junior eleven right merrily in the mud, prevented it from scoring, and much bespattered it in an unseemly and irreverent manner. Naughty-one retired from the grid-iron covered with a great glory, since they had not only prevented a heavier eleven from scoring, but, according to impartial Seniors, had played the better game. The pæan which they chanted muchly irritated Junior ears. You remember Dan Daly, in the "Belle of New York." When the Naughty-ones sang—sure!—sang the above enchanting chant in the Druid Hill car stables it precipitated a fight. A Junior standard was captured and the Junior class, being tumbled out of the car stables, were put gently but firmly on a car with the same tenderness which characterizes a nurse placing a fractious infant in a baby-carriage. The Freshmen, in another car, escorted their 'e-roes to the cage. After the manner of Freshmen, they cheered everybody liberally. When in a state of exhaustion, they had finished the conductor and motorman, some one arose. Gazing absently around for yet another worthy object on which to vent a yell, his eye fell upon the inevitable Heinz's pickle advertisement. "One for Heinz now!" he shouted. The enthusiasm of the last yell having died away, Mr. Swindell entertained the class with some flowing oratory in which he showed a perfect command of the most fluent vituperative powers. Arrived at the cage, the Freshmen entered it in a body, with the exception of Raechel, the "Venus of the Shower Bath." His rash and impetuous nature had carried him to the door, but there he stopped, struck, as he privately informed me, with this revolting thought, "What if my classic beauty should be spoiled in the scuffle!" Urged on by this terrible possibility, he frantically disengaged himself from the inflowing throng, and, from a neighboring window, watched, in the cane-rush which ensued, the victory of his class by a score of 13 hands to 10.

The Freshmen held their banquet on February 10 and 11—I can say no more without compromising them. The Juniors, prevented by the Dean's edict and a wholesome respect, born of experience, for the Naughty-ones made no attempt to mar the occasion by their inharmonious presence.

In athletics the Freshman class has many promising men. Four Naughty-ones, Bruton, Griffin, Sayler, and Whitman, played on the 'Varsity eleven in some of the State championship games. Miller, Constantine, Griffin, and Briscoe bid fair to make the 'Varsity baseball nine this spring. The Freshman lacrosse candidates are numerous, and, at this early date, it is hard to pick the best men. On the track, Tyler, Miller, Bruton, and Swindell have shown fine form. Fishach, at the Columbian games last fall, pole-vaulted nine feet six, which is the Hopkins record.

Machen, Briscoe, Bird, Swindell, Noble, and a host of minor lights—in fact, nearly all the class can talk—are the orators. They have studied the Syllabus, and can recite selections from "McGuffey's Fourth Reader" and the "School Girls' Garlands."

In the Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, the class is represented by Bird, Vogeler, Fishach, Bernheim, Cook and Swindell.

Duck and Swindell are the class artists. I might go on indefinitely ; every Naughty-one in fact has some predominant individuality.

When the Naughty-ones first entered the University, they were magnanimously tolerated by everybody from the elevator boy to the janitor (I mention the latter as the highest official in the place); now, however, they have won the respect of their Seniors, and have set a brave example for future classes placed in the same awkward position.

Class Statistics.

THE number, forty-six. Eight States and one foreign nation have representatives among us. Maryland leads the van by sending thirty-four of her stalwart sons. Next come Massachusetts, West Virginia, Kentucky and New York, each of which furnishes two men to our organization. The quotas of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Georgia are one each. Hanover, Germany, also has a representative.

Vocation.—Henceforth our paths of life will diverge in nine directions. Ten have decided to devote their time and attention to the cure of the body. The profession of Law holds equal favor with us as her sister profession, Medicine. Ten will master the details of jurisprudence. Six will teach young ideas how to shoot, while three will enter the ministry, and three will exercise their talents in buying and selling. One will be a broker, one a banker, one hopes to win fame by robbing the earth of her minerals, and another hopes to make money. Six have not yet chosen their path in life, but two of these have intimated that they will be gentlemen of leisure.

Politics.—As a whole, we are Democratic. Twenty-one follow the standard of Democracy, fourteen that of Republicanism, four wish to see the ruby wine banished from this country, while two claim to be Independents, two have not yet reached that stage of life which entitles them to have an opinion, one has only one political ambition—he is uncompromisingly “Anti-Keidel.”

Age.—Our average age is twenty-one years eight months. There are two who have had but eighteen birthdays, while one member has attained all the dignity that belongs to an aged man of twenty-six years.

Weight and Height.—Our heavyweight (W. M. F.) tips the scales at two hundred and twelve pounds, our featherweight (T. D. J.) at one hundred and eighteen. Our total weight is 6381 pounds, the average 145 pounds. In height we range from 5 feet 4½ inches (L. M. C.) to 6 feet 1½ inches (S. W. F.), the average man standing at 5 feet 8.8 inches.

One of our number has already taken upon himself the yoke of wedlock. Others hope to enter that blissful state soon. Five wear what may be termed moustaches. A few others might be added to this list if the proverbial numbers of seventeen hairs on one side and eighteen on the other could be dignified by such a name. Some of us are familiarly known as “Skip,” “Parson,” “Fossie,” “Tiberius Gracchus,” “Dutch,” “Guggy,” “Bert,” “Kragé,” “Kurley,” “Lazy,” “Josh,” “Kid” and “Lucy.”

All reckless research is discouraged. Every possible precaution is taken to insure economy in the use of materials. For each broken test-tube, proper and sufficient satisfaction must be given. Whenever any of the larger apparatus is damaged, the offender is justly forced to pay the penalty of a dinner to his associates.

It is a matter of deepest regret that an organization of such noble purpose should be so limited in membership.

Hopkins Orchestral Association.

SINCE other large colleges have orchestras, why should Hopkins be an exception? This question has at last received a favorable solution. Hopkins has an orchestra, and a good one, too. Despite its infancy, it has done much to encourage the study of the great composers, and has already won fame for itself by clever rendition of difficult classics.

At present it is made up of twelve pieces. Recitals are given Sunday afternoons at Meter's Park.

The Athletic Association.

IN the Fall of '97, the time-honored constitution of the Athletic Association was forced to give place to an instrument which could more conveniently deal with the changing conditions of athletics at the University.

All branches of athletics were consolidated under the control of a Board of Directors, which should direct the policy, and administer the government according to the provisions of the new constitution. The voice of the students en masse alone was superior to the judgments of this Board.

In this stage of development, the new constitution lived through a season. Its advantages over the old constitution were immediately felt. However, its defects were watched no less closely than its merits; and as a result of this careful attention to that constitutional experiment, the Athletic Association is governed by an organ which has proved its power and efficiency, and which demands universal respect.

Fortunately, the men who have instituted this new organization are men of exceptional ability and foresight. It is hoped that future classes will produce men capable of taking their place in giving as efficient administration to athletics at Hopkins.

The new constitution is plastic in nature, and can be adapted to the exigencies of all times. Whatever conditions may arise, the fundamental principles of government, as there laid down, will be found to be a capable safeguard to the rights of the team and of the individual.

FOOTBALL TEAM.

THE maxim, "history repeats itself," has again proved true. A start that is good to behold, a finish that is—well. Another football season with bright prospects concluded by a disastrous ending must be recorded in the annals of Hopkins athletics.

Our first game was with Rock Hill. I have been told that the authorities there, not liking the ratio of 23 to 0, formed a society for the prevention of cruelty to children, and made the Rock Hill boys the first objects of their care. But the Rock Hill boys were not the only ones to suffer, for our enormous sick list caused by the sumptuous supper kindly tendered us by the Rock Hill management, had much to do with a defeat sustained a few days later at the hands of the Druid Athletic Club.

Inspired by this reverse, our team worked hard and faithfully, and had its reward in whipping the Baltimore Medical College by the safe margin of 18 to 0. One of the doctors who bucked up against our invincible line observed that he was glad he was in the profession because he need not receive a "bill est due" for the professional services necessary.

Our boys next met Maryland Agricultural College and taught them a thing or two about the great college game. We were very much surprised to find that the farmers not only couldn't play football, but also seemed to be ignorant concerning the proper condition in which to keep an athletic field.

Everybody thought that agriculturalists would surely know how to rake a field; the implements were there, but perhaps the professors hadn't taught them that, as yet.

The next team we had to tackle was composed of eleven Western Maryland College men and their rooters, and we tackled them hard and low, and downed them by the score of 10 to 0. The mountain-climbers seemed to have lost all their prowess when they came down to level earth.

So far, so good! We had played and won two championship games, and visions of another championship banner rose before the eyes of our team and our small band of faithful rooters. But dumb luck and deaf-mutes were too much for us. Weakened and discouraged, we met St. John's a few days later, and after a plucky fight were defeated by the very close score of 6 to 0.

Thus perished our hopes for the championship, and thus ended the football season of 1898.

 Which lonely in our gym. has hung,
 At last has found its sequel, mate,

SEVEN is a sacred number: there are seven days in creation, seven Graces, seven phases of the moon, seven days in the week, and seven years that it took Johns Hopkins University to produce a second championship Lacrosse Team. It might be inferred from this that our enthusiastic supporters will have to allow seven more long, weary years to elapse before we can produce another championship team ; but Athletics and Logical Inference are not associated with one another, and thank heaven for it !

Rome had its Cæsar, Carthage its Hannibal, Russia its Peter the Great, and our Lacrosse Team its Maddren. He came to us when there were few, if any, lacrosse players at the University worthy of a Hopkins team ; yet from this chaos, he evolved a team which, although it did not win the championship, was far from being a discredit to the University. Last year, however, he received his just reward, not in captaining the championship team, but in seeing that long coveted banner wave over the Hopkins cage. Long may it wave, and may it stimulate each and every one of us, who is interested in the success of Hopkins athletics, to put forth every effort to maintain the position which we now hold—the only position which Hopkins ought to be satisfied to hold—the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Championship of the United States.

TRACK AND FIELD TEAM.

SINCE the early spring of last year, the longest course of continuous victory ever enjoyed by any Hopkins team has been won by Mackdermott's legion. The end of the course is not yet reached, and the way ahead is still clear. The Hopkins track and field men have swept unchecked over every athletic field at home; the native colleges have cried them quit, "let go one-half your strength and give us dead men's chances;" and the athletic clubs in the land about hold their Hopkins visitors in scarred memories. And the Hopkins track and field men have carried their colors to the North and set their flags by the banners of the greatest in the country, with dozens of larger schools in the rear. The Hopkins track and field team is beyond all question the strongest track and field team that ever existed south of the University of Pennsylvania.

The team itself is the reasonable outcome of excellent judgment and tact applied to the development of Hopkins men and conditions. Mr. Mackdermott, who is its first cause, founded it on nothing three years ago, and has been its spirit ever since. His business knowledge of athletics, his tact in the handling of his men, and his skill in teaching them the art of their game, are the three qualities of leadership that have made the team. He made the first representative Hopkins team that I ever saw, and his team was the first to prove that Hopkins men, in general, are as good as those of other schools.

Our University also is peculiar in attracting to it many athletes who have made large fame for themselves in foreign fields. It is this condition that has brought to the team as free aids to its coach and new strength to its body such men as Robert Garrett, C. W. Ottley, J. I. Butler, J. S. Macfarland, T. F. Riggs, and Lawrence Griffin. These men are a distinction to us at home and give us certain rank abroad. They are the best of our team, and their constant coming is a positive guarantee of Hopkins stability in track and field athletics.

Understand, also, that track and field work is peculiarly work for the individual, in which the pains are those of the single worker, the reward for which is won by the single winner, and you understand then that track and field work should commend itself with especial force to Hopkins men. In such a disunited, lack-spirit body of students as ours unfortunately is, the individual activity of the single man must always count the highest, for this is easiest to call out, and surest to endure.

The residence in Baltimore of an excellent coach, the exciting presence of famous athletes from other schools, and the distinguished fitness of the sport for the needs of our students, all have added each its part to our track and field success. Such absolute and immediate success is here unheard of, but is not surprising if its causes be known.

At the Princeton Handicap Games last spring, the team outscored its host, with the heavy help, it must be confessed, of two Princetonians, and ran second to the great band from Pennsylvania. The handicapper, no doubt supposing that Dr. Ottley had been out of college long enough to grow stiff-legged, gave him a short lead on the great Fetterman. Fetterman was walking well, but walking still, when Ottley won the walk. Knapp had a good start in the 100 yards, and left such men as Rush and Tewkesbury behind; with only a short lead in the 220 yards, he finished on Tewkesbury's heels. Mullen ran a strong quarter, and Garrett also performed. A guess about Garrett is less troublesome than a history, and, in view of his prowess, will do just as well.

At the Pennsylvania Relay Games our four finished 250 yards ahead of its field in an almost uncontested race, with Columbian University second. Mullen, Radcliffe, Knapp and Fitzgerald ran, Morrison reserved himself, Mackdermott rated them, Louis rubbed them, and Seth rooted them on.

At the meet of the Intercollegiate Association of America three men and one coach represented the team. We tied for sixth place, with only the Big Five before us. Garrett and Ottley again won places in their events, but the railroad journey and strange fare at the hotel must have made Mullen unwell.

In the first meet of the Maryland Intercollegiate Association we competed against the other schools of the State, and their story of the competition is a sad one. Everybody went into the meet and everyone added something to our score. Our good friend Cornelius, from under the eaves on Charles street, was present in the referee's responsible place. He did his work willingly and well, but we nevertheless were able to score 91 points in 140. The association, I understand, no longer approves of graduate students.

In the fall, before term-time, a new team was brought together, with Fitzgerald as captain. The spirit of this team was the best I ever saw in any Hopkins team, and undoubtedly held it up against worse odds than commonly beset our teams. The Lacrosse Team was represented on it as never before by Abercrombie, Robinson, Fitzgerald and Knapp, and its universal spirit made it win. The men entered the first meet of the Maryland Athletic Union, on September 24, against the best of the nine open clubs of Maryland. We won most of the firsts and still more of the lesser places, and nearly trebled the score of our nearest competitor, the Maryland Athletic Club. This was beyond all question the greatest meet ever held in Baltimore, and the Hopkins victory the greatest ever won by it.

Two weeks later, on October 8, the team ended its fall season in the handicap meet of the Columbia Athletic Club, of Washington. Here our men competed against the best athletes in the District, and outscored all the home teams together, bicycle races not counted. The features of the meet were the loss of the scratch discus by Garrett, Knapp's new speed, Abercrombie's plucky half-mile, and the wonderful handicapping. Garrett raised his own hammer record 4 feet, and won from scratch. Griffin, our acquisition from Minnesota, took a big place in the shot, won by Scholl with a long handicap. Knapp's fear of such opponents as Spear and Cabrera frightened out of him speed enough to beat both of them decisively from scratch in the 100 yards, and with an insignificant lead in the 220. Abercrombie's race, a close second to Armstrong from the same mark in the half-mile, was one of the gamest run that day.

The losses of the team have been slight—Weedon and Smith the only serious ones—and the gains are great—T. F. Riggs, J. I. Butler, A. L. Auer, O. L. Karsted and Lawrence Griffin, all practiced athletes and record-holders, and all Freshmen. Every material sign indicates a continuance of track and field success.

Mr. O'flaherty on William M. Mackdermott.

“I V coarse, he's Oirish,” said Mr. O'Flaherty. “Th' Mackdermotts an' th' McHughs an' th' McSweeneys is not far apart. Oi've a cousin be th' name of McSweeney, an' loike is not, Mack is a relation iv moine.”

“If Oi was you, Oi'd wroite 'im an' see,” said Mr. O'Rourke. “He's a ghreat man.”

“He is so,” said Mr. O'Flaherty. “He is that. Wan iv the ghreatest. An' why shuddent he be with that name? There's pothry in it. Bill Moike Mackdermott! An' faith, O'Rourke, did ye iver see th' mon? Did ye iver see a picture iv him? A little mon, with a big head, an' a chist, oh, O'Rourke, ye ought to see that chist, a rigular groserly-box iv a chist. Sandy-haired an' red-faced. Th' koind iv a mon that can git mad in ivry vein in his body. I bet ye his face looks loike a foire in a furniture facthry. Whin a maan gits pale with rage, look out f'r a knoife in th' back. But whin he flames up so that th' perspiration stews on his face, look out f'r hand, an' fate an' head an' couplin'-pins an' brickbats. Mack kin be ca'm whin they'se annything to be ca'm about, but he can't wait. Look at th' jaw iv him! It's a regular rabid-foirin' gun. He is wan iv th' most illoquint young laads that iver made a spakin' thrumpet iv his face. He kin holler loike th' impire iv a baseball game; an' whin he delivers th' sintimints iv his heaart, ye'd think he was thryin' to confoide thim to ivry mon in Bhaltimore. Oi've been told, O'Rourke, that th' next day after th' fade, where Mack made his grate spache in favor iv lacrosse an' agin thrack-ithlitics, Kernel Crinshawl had to hoire a carpenter to mend the windows, cause they'd sagged so.

“That's Father Bill. He's ca'm an he's quite, part iv th' toime. That's whin he's aslape. But as soon as his oies opins, his face begins to flare up loike wan iv thim incandissent ark loights. An' fr'm that toime on, till he's riddy to turrrn in an' slape paseful an' quite, he niver stops a-rampin' an' a-ragin'. Ye don't hear iv Mack lookin' worn with th' sthuggle. Ye don't hear iv him missin' anny meals. No one fears that Mack will brake down undher th' suspins. That ain't in th' breed. He's anither koind iv a mon. He hasn't got th' toime to be toired an' wurrid. He needs food, an' he has it; an' he needs slape, an' he takes it; an' he needs ithlitics, an' he makes it; an' he needs foightin', an he gits it. That's Father Bill.

“Oi tell ye, O'Rourke, whin a mon has a timper loike Mack's, an' his face flames up, an' his neck swells, an' his oies loike like a couple of ilicthric lamps in a dark noight, he'd lead a forlorn hope acrost th' battlemints of hell.—Be jabers! he's a ghreat ithlete, an' a ghreat thrainer, an' O'Rourke, he's been a godsind to Hopkins Thrack Ithlitics.”

“He's a foine mon,” said Mr. O'Rourke, earnestly.

“He is,” said Mr. O'Flaherty. “He is that. An th' bist iv it is, he knows he is.”

THE SENIOR GIRL.

To the Senior Girl.

In boyish strife with whirring top or kite,
When we had gained some little victory,
Or won a race run in thy sight,
We ever looked, and not in vain, to thee.

And when in later, freer college days
For athlete's nimble strength or flying speed,
Or scholars hard-earned lore, we wore the bays,
Still in thy smile we found our fairest meed.

Gone are such days. Things once our all in all,
Regarded in the mood for manhood meet,
Lose their import and pass from great to small.

Again we'll strive, all for thy favor sweet,
And in the world, if no mischance befall,
Once more we'll lay our laurels at thy feet.

To Christhlf.

(With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley.)

Oh, the Swaggery Man he works for Dan,
An' he's built on a vast an' spachus plan.
He thinks he owns 'bout all he sees,
An' he doesn't do much but rattle keys,
An' wander about, an' order loud,
An' puff his chest, an' look real proud.
An' nen he runs a cent-slot machine,
An' takes in the pennies we get from Green.
Ain't he a lovely big Swaggery Man?
Swaggery! Swaggery! Swaggery Man!

An' the Swaggery Man, he's ist so big,
He talks 'bout boxin' an' doin' a jig,
An' nen he makes fine cam'ras too,
An' does most things 'at we can't do.
He's awful chummy with Tommy Ball,
An' him an' Tom ist run "Mac Hall."
An' little ol' "Mac" ist trimbles through,
When he orders aroun' his hobo crew.
Ain't he a awful fierce Swaggery Man?
Swaggery! Swaggery! Swaggery Man!

An' the Swaggery Man in the days when they
Was banquits an' scraps an' things was gay,
Was high-chief spy fer the Dean an' Fac.,
An' the Freshmen'd scoot at the sight o' his back.
They ain't no one so great's the Swaggery Man,
He rules ever'one,—even great Uncle Dan.
An' when we get big like he is, then,
Why we're go' to try to be Swaggery Men.
Ist 'normous big, roarin' great Swaggery Men,
Swaggery! Swaggery! Swaggery Men.

A Senior's Reverie.

My pipe is like the crystal globes,
In which the fortune-teller reads,
The present, past and future bright,
Strange tales of love and noble deeds.

In clouds of azure colored smoke
Which slowly from the bowl arise,
I see myself again a boy
In happy days of big mud-pies.

The vapor rolls, and as it fades
The face floats off framed in the rings.
A second pull at the long fig stem
Another, sweeter phantom brings.

My first sweetheart, a dark-haired elf,
Who laughs and shakes her bonny curls.
The only one that e'er loved me,
Ma soeur, the dearest, best of girls.

From out the grate a coal I lift,
And light again the soothing weed.
This time the smoke soars higher up,
Where fondest hopes fulfilled I read.

My hopes? Oh, well, it would not do
To tell them here to everybody.
They interest my pipe and me
And—yes! some other body.

These things my bird's-eye briar wood
Shows me when bidden with a kiss.
What need one care for fickle hearts
With such a tried, true friend as this?

Boom! Boom!! Boom!!!

I'm a terrible freak—
You should just hear me speak,
Why I stutter, and stutter, and stutter;
But as a debater
I'm no second rater,
With my "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"
I just broaden my chest,
And swell out my vest,
And expand, and expand, and expand,
When ready to utter
My wonderful splutter,
Which is "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"
Then I wrinkle my brow,
(But I don't know just how,)
And I frown, and I frown, and I frown;
And flap with my wings,
While the atmosphere rings
With my "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"

When the Senate looked hazy,
And thought me gone crazy,
Then I laugh'd, and I laugh'd, and I laugh'd;
And shouted once more,
With a leonine roar,
The words "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"
All the Senators fled
In the direst of dread,
While I chuckled, and chuckled, and chuckled;
And awarded the vote
To the last man who spoke,
With his "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"
Oh, I'm a dangerous man,—
And I don't care a d —,
You may call me Ti. Gracchus or not,—
For I carry the day,
In my own patent way,
With my "Boom!—Boom!—Boom!"

Their Brief Campaign.

IT was the Fourth of July. Enthusiasm waxed, and with the thermometer at 110° by moonlight, was rapidly melting and trickling down. The country was stirred to its core. With an overwhelming unanimity the Faculty decided to go to the front. They organized in secret, for they sought to astound the community.

Joe Am—s had surreptitiously obtained the keys from Jim, and the drills were held in the cage at midnight. The cop had been bought off; the Colonel, who had kicked about the noise, was supplied with sumptuous apartments at the Stafford, and all was going as merrily as a marriage bell.

The only hitch had been in the selection of a captain. Finally on this eventful night, after much discussion and bickering, Basil L. G—ld—rsleeve, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D., D.C.L., etc., etc., was chosen to the honored position. Enthusiastically they made the election unanimous.

Vive! Hoch! Hurrah! arose the cosmopolitan shout. A long-haired voice solemnly asked: "Ennybowdy object?"

Ennybowdy did not.

H—pt, with the agility born of many unexpected dismounts, sprang upon the track-roller and, skillfully balancing himself on one foot, said: "Gentlemen, my advice has been followed, whereupon I congratulate you on your discernment. I wish to say that I, even I"—he dodged and deftly caught a Babylonian brick hurled at him by an admirer.

"No bouquets, please!" yelled Sh—rw—d.

"The gentleman is envious. I am H—pt. I am accustomed to such honors." And carelessly rumpling his off-glide pompadour, he calmly sauntered forth with a sarcastic cuneiform expression on his placid countenance.

The atmosphere grew polychrome at this disastrous blow to the meeting. H—pt, the great H—pt, was offended. Helas! With Murder in their hearts they sought the culprit. Then the Dean stepped forth, clad in flowing robes—the insignia of power—and calmly reasoned that the action of the great man's assailant was justifiable on a posteriori grounds—the effect it had produced.

An instant calm pervaded the riotous multitude as the silvery tones of the orator were wafted on the breeze. Through force of habit some of the younger members slumbered. At this point the newly-elected commander approached.

A sudden hush tried to fall upon the company, but they were too far gone for that. They yawned, stretched themselves, and attempted to give three rousing cheers for the immortal G—ld—rsleeve.

But "No, no! on no account! on no account, gentlemen!" exclaimed the Dean, gesticulating wildly. "Why——"

G—ld—rsleeve strode proudly to the front.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I am touched." Sp—k—r blushed painfully. "You have honored me greatly in this our patriotic enterprise. I trust that you will not have cause to regret this mark of confidence and esteem. We are here from patriotic motives. Manly fervor swells every breast. Love of fatherland stirs mightily within, and eagerly seeks an opportunity to escape." Keid—l enthusiastically kneaded his shapely calves.

"As a representative body we shall be received with open arms on our arrival in Cuba. We shall be given the position of honor—in the van. Of this I am confident. Think of the glory when we rush into the hottest of the fight. Think, I say, of the glory for old Tom Hopkins."

He ceased.

There was not a dry eye in the place. Bl—mf—ld sobbed openly. G—r arose. "Comrades," said he, with a break in his voice, "the glory is too great. I am a modest man and will retire in favor of some one more worthy and more desirous of fame."

"Me, too!" shouted a vast chorus from parched lips.

The commander frowned so darkly that the arc lights sizzled with fear.

"Lock the doors!" he cried sternly.

St—ner hastily did his bidding. (The doors lock on the outside.)

There was a stampede for the exit, and as the key screeched in the lock, with despairing cries they swooned in legions.

The medical force hastily set to work. When quiet was finally restored, and Barker, after Herculean efforts had assuaged Gr—ne's agitated neurones, G—ld—rsleeve again stepped forward.

"To-night," said he, "to test the valor of every man, we shall have a sham battle. Lieutenant Holl—nd—r!"

Holl—nd—r carefully took the curling papers out of his hindmost bangs, smoothed out his London cape-coat and gravely saluted.

"Lieutenant V—ncent!" cried the commander in thundering tones.

V—ncent carefully shambled forward.

"Divide your men into companies and await the order to begin the attack."

With despatch the men were lined up. Holl—nd—r thinking the moment propitious began an address by telling a few anecdotes. He concluded his remarks with: "Soldiers, enter this contest with brave hearts. Our opponents are chicken-hearted. Advance pari passu, and the status quo will not be difficult to maintain. When an adversary assails you give him quid pro quo and tabula rasa will be your reward." Holl—nd—r then smiled.

The dark blood mantled V—ncent's alabaster forehead.

"Men," cried he, "those chaps are the worst hobos that ever came down the pike. They are so decrepit that were it not for the starch in their shirts their backbones would slop over."

"Companies fall in!" rang out the sharp command.

"Forward, march!" cried Lieutenant Holl—nd—r. "Double quick!"

At the word, Keid—I sprang forward like a hound from the leash. Unmindful of discipline, the company stopped in rapt admiration of his graceful action. Jew—I rapidly took seventeen snap shots. When he reached the confines of the cage he stopped. There was a deafening burst of applause. The Dean, completely carried away by the splendid performance, led a vociferous gee-hee, gee-haw.

Keid—I pranced back like a spirited cow and saluted.

"If it be the will of the company, Captain," he modestly murmured, "I will do an exhibition half-mile. I have my satchel with me." Without waiting for a reply, he retired.

"Company, attention!"

"One moment!" shouted Gr—ne, as he stopped and rolled up his trousers out of harm's way.

Tommy Bak—r kindly volunteered to render the "Hymn Before Action." After mature deliberation his offer was declined, with thanks.

"Charge!" cried the Lieutenants in one breath.

With convulsive spontaneity they charged. Their method was a sublime revelation. The mighty walls shook to their foundations as the companies retired precipitately to their respective corners.

"Well done, men! well done!" cried Holl—nd—r, burying his head ostrich-like in the jumping-box.

R—mbeau excitedly danced the can-can, and cussed profusely in provincial French. The voice of the commander, proceeding from the rafters, was lost in the prevailing commotion. Kirby perpetrated a joke. Unfortunately the press censorship positively prohibited its publication. W—ls—n looked shocked.

When the dust of battle had somewhat subsided, the arena was seen to be occupied by a confused mass of limbs.

There was a horrible mix-up. Le— rubbed his hands in glee. Finally the bleeding and tattered figures of Br—ght and W—d emerged from the heap. They gasped for breath and vituperatively maintained the propriety of their respective derivations of certain Slavonic roots.

Language failed to express their emotions and once more they fell to. Blows fell in rapid redundancy. There was a plethora of uppercuts, cross-counters and swings. Finally W—d gathered himself for a cruel left-upper-cut. Br—ght wasn't where he should have been, and W—d's left landed with a sickening thud on his own cervical vertebræ. With a wild gasp he collapsed.

Shooting sauer-kraut glances about him, R—no—f jumped into the ring and declared all bets off. Guy Carleton, who had heavily backed the winner, sprang forward and began: "Colleagues, profs., and fellow-hobos, lend me your——"

There was a wild rush and a dozen stalwart forms fell upon him and crushed him to earth. W—rr—n, disguised as "Alberich," executed a pas seul on his chest, and soulfully chanted the Nibelung Motif. While H—lburt fiendishly plucked out his long hairs one by one.

In a last convulsive spasm, the prostrate giant jumped from his tormentors and fell sprawling over Andr—ws, busily engaged in examining a stray tooth with his pocket lens. He arched his right eyebrow inquiringly at the intruder and murmured appreciatively: "An anthropoid ape, ha-ha!"

Suddenly the door burst open. The assemblage grew silent. For preceded by his lictors—Jim, Tommy B—ll, Christhlf, and Billy Stewart, and the elevator lad bearing a link, the august person of Uncle Dan loomed up, his flowing toga supported by two ethereal pages—Schneider and Sapp.

Sweetly smiling, Uncle Dan bowed right and left. Then rubbing his hands together, he said: "Gentlemen, I have some very joyful news to communicate."

After a ten minute introduction, and a half-hour of side remarks, he finally gave expression in glowing and rhetorical language to the glorious news of our naval victory in Santiago Bay.

For one brief moment there was the silence of joy too intense for words. Then Sh—ttuck, the first to get off his mark, shouted: "Hurrah! no war for us!"

His words broke the spell. Pandemonium was let loose. Enthusiastic members fell on each other's collar-buttons and wept. G—ld—rsleeve's vain attempts to make himself heard were too much for the sturdy rafter. It trembled, split, and precipitated the unfortunate commander on the devoted head of the autocrat of the "lift."

A mad mêlée ensued. They struggled fiercely to get near the prostrate body. But G—ld—rsleeve arose, smiling and unhurt. Congratulations flowed like liquefied air. Unable to contain himself, Tommy Bak—r burst into song. The very cinders quivered. Inspired by the sound, Keid—l made a last effort and, with a marvelous burst of speed, fell across the line. Time—two hours and thirty-five minutes.

Wh—tem—n hastily dashed off an impressionistic landscape of his porcupine quills as he was borne off the track by "Jim." With a last gasp, he cried: "My satchel!" and expired.

The noise increased. Uncle Dan was carried about on the shoulders of his disciples. The Dean tucked his flowing robes around his waist and indulged in Terpsichorean contortions.

R—mbeau beamed like an archangel. In a corner Br—wn— as Hamlet and Gr—n as Ophelia held spellbound a vast crowd, listening with bared heads to the liquid utterances.

But the dawn had been unceremoniously approaching—as dawns will. A cock crew, and with the sound the assemblage melted away as if by magic. The only traces of their debauch (and this is how we found it all out, and were enabled to give this truthful history to the world) remained in the squashed fragments of the elevator boy.

In Pace Requiescat.

Guy Talks in His Sleep.

In truth, I am one of the boys,
I am one of their chiefest joys;
My name is known from shore to shore
As a forensic orator;
Quintessences are nought to me.
I am the sixth essence, you see;
I have the cream of human wit,
No hat will on this forehead sit;
I am the peacherine of love,
I call myself "the turtle dove."
I draw my head within my chest
To show I sometimes wear a vest.
I wear my shoes upon my feet,
To teach my pupils to be neat.
I use my shapely blushing tongue
To pick my toothlets, everichon.
I keep my fingers long and slim,
It makes them handy for each whim.
My hair is long and soft and fine,

I had it cut in eighty-nine. (He snores.)
My shoulders are quite strongly set,
Y' can see that hump already yet.
The students dote upon my eyes,
Kind nature, too, did dote likewise
But dote without the e sufficed. (He sighs.)
My syllabus is great to read;
It really makes good chicken feed.
Of books I've written many more,
They keep them all at every store. (He grunts.)
There's not a word I cannot say,
I swear, I preach, and I can pray.
So I am just the stuff, you see,
Of which a teacher ought to be.

(He now becomes incoherent, so the phonograph was unable to catch and record it. Sounded something like "D—— it! I wonder if Dr. Adams heard that row.")

ow ferd Didn't Write His Epic.

Ferdinand was ambitious. He would be a poet. He would write an epic. He would astonish his friends. The whole University would ring with his praises. A modern epic. A modern Homeric epic! The HULLABALOO editors were delighted. They waited expectantly. They counted the pages. They seemed to see it unfold, and to read its burning lines.

* * * * *

It was midnight. The clock had struck and all was again deathly still. A portable lamp shed a subdued light on a table covered with papers. At the table sat Ferdinand, reclining in a sea of pillows, pen in hand as if ready to write. Long had he sat thus. He was gazing steadily before him into the dark shadows of a remote corner—not a movement of the eye, not a quiver of the lip—absolutely motionless, staring with the fixity of a statue, sat he there. At times his vision seemed to pierce the gloom, and then his eyes would kindle with a transient flame. Doubtless, his mind, prolific in its fancies, caught glimpses of terrible combat, of glorious deeds of valor, of thrilling rescue, of heroic death. His reverie was indeed profound. He seemed totally oblivious of his surroundings, and of the lateness of the hour. He was completely absorbed in watching the phantoms which people the shadow-land.

Suddenly, his countenance changes. The muscles of his face relax, his lips part, his eyes glow with a celestial light,—he murmurs, indistinctly at first, then—"thy floating flaxen hair, thy crimson-flowered lip, thy full blue eye, thy transparent cheek, the luxuriant symmetry of thy native gracefulness— Oh, my heart's elected! My soul's heaven! Thou idol of my youth, thou darling of my manhood! Speak, my beloved, speak! See the fever that burns upon my cheek! I am on fire within! I see thee in everything I see! I have no thoughts that do not think of thee! Thou echo of my heart, I have seen thy beauty gradually unfold, daily and hourly, more and more; yet never did I behold thee so attired and garmented in beauty as to-night! Thou art a miniature of loveliness, thou art one blaze of glory! Charmer of my ravished sight, be an angel still! Oh, speak—one dulcet word——"

The clock strikes one. Ferdinand starts. He yawns. "Ah, 'tis ever thus," he sighs. "Fifty-one nights and nothing accomplished. Yes, like a lily on a river floating, she ever floats upon the river of my thoughts." He rises. "Damnation! Away with epics! Away with fame! Give me love! Sweet love! True love!"

The Hopkins Company.

I.

The President asked for an army of men,
To fight in the war with Spain;
And Hopkins students who heard the call,
Were ready with hand and brain.
A hundred men with a firm resolve,
Cried aloud with might and main:
"Let us hasten to learn the art of war,
Then woe to the power of Spain."

II.

The company met in warlike mood,
Noble one hundred men!
Their captain marched them around the cage,
And marched them around again.
Thus some grew weary in one short day,
Though the nation had need of them,
And these, when they softly stole away,
Left the company less by ten.

III.

And ninety men of determined minds,
Ready to do and dare,
Lined up in the cage at the Captain's word,
And drilled with a martial air.
When some went out to an army camp,
To learn of the soldiers' fare:
When the company met for drill next day,
There were only eighty there.

IV.

But the hearts of the eighty were firm and strong,
And keen was their thirst for war;
Till a soldier who passed that way one day,
Looked in at the open door,
And swore with a laugh that so awkward a squad,
He never had seen before.
This saddened the hearts of the eighty men,
And ten of them drilled no more.

V.

Into the cage the seventy went,
 Filled with a proud disdain.
 "Let the faint-hearted go," they said,
 "The best of us still remain."
 But the news was spread of a mighty fleet,
 Just sailed from the coast of Spain,
 And ten of those who marched out that day,
 Failed to come back again.

VII.

'Twas thus with the noble company,
 That answered their country's call,
 Their hearts were brave and their courage strong
 Even to fight and fall.
 But numbers and patience and courage alike
 Faded from great to small.
 For every day, ten slipped away,
 Until there were none at all.

VI.

But sixty remained who laughed at fear,
 And their hearts were light and gay,
 Till the Captain was asked by a practical one:
 "How much is a soldier's pay?"
 And the Captain, a blunt, straightforward man,
 Told them the truth that day.
 The company met for drill again,
 But ten more staid away.

VIII.

All honor those hundred Hopkins men,
 That little devoted band,
 Though their names are not written in brass and stone,
 Nor lauded throughout the land:
 For against the hungry tooth of time
 Bravely they made their stand,
 Till at last in their decimated ranks
 There was not one left to disband.

Bogus Raptus.

HELP me, O Muse! to sing of raging wars
And frightful strifes, that gods with furies wag'd
Mid howling thunder, lightning's blazing wreaths,
And leaping blasts of angry winds conflicting,
Upon the purple banks of gloomy Styx (Back River).
Help me to sing the wond'rous victory
Of Heaven's favor'd race of demigods.
That race of mighty brawn and endless wit,
That noble race, the Class of Ninety-nine.

With woeful heart and hateful mien he struts,
That ghastly monster, the furies' Lord and King.
He lifts his voice and belches forth with flame
This direful speech unto his hell-born band:
"I hear, most glorious creatures, imps of hell,
The demigods in holy convocation
Assemble shall on Vernon's classic mount,
To quaff dear Mum's old nectar extra dry.
On courses ten their shining faces feed,
And o'er the wreath'd ambrosial bowl of gold
Their spirits mingle in unbounded joy.
Oh, curse! Oh, spite! Oh, hateful sight! No, no!
This shall not be! No, no! Bear witness Hell,
By th' English beard of thundering Dan, I swear!
To arms ye valiant sons of ignorance,
Your might employ, your venom spit now forth,
Infernal machinations now contrive.
All, all, now curse! Now spit, now smoke, now chew.
Hate life and water, count nought dear but booze.
To arms! I say, go haste ye forth. Go, go!
Ere Phœbus gilds again with streaming fire

The radiant smile of Mercury the Dean
 Of Heaven. Go, kidnap Juniors all
 And drag them hither, drunk or sober. Go!"
 Stung to the heart the furies fly,
 And running here and there they fiercely hiss
 Between their teeth this baneful chorus wild.*

* * * * *

On, on the furies come until they reach
 Their goal, the side door of Olympia.
 And here their stupid beer-blurred orbs behold
 The warlike Bogue alone, who sheds his coat
 And blows his nose and dares the devils on.
 A hissing phalanx having formed to meet
 Their foe, the hell-born creatures rush
 Just as a surging sea, which driven fast
 Before a stormy gale doth swelling climb
 The sky, engulfing all that bars the way.
 Thus does this monstrous mass of brainless meat
 Engulf within its slimy, cheesy folds,
 The fated Bogue, who spends his noble sweat
 In vain ——— ——— ——— ——— ———
 ——— ——— is dragged ——— ——— ——— ———
 ——— ——— ——— ——— Tartarus ——— ———

(Hiatus in MSS.)

Loud barks the Gryffin, hated furies' King :
 "Behold the demigods in hot pursuit,
 Allies of Dullness! Friends of Pride! To arms!
 To arms! ye tender beardless lemonade—
 Sucking patrons of the Rathskeller.
 Our goddess Envy all our hearts inspire.
 To arms! ye lovers bold of beer and cheese,
 Defend the prey your fearless valor won,
 Defy the gods that now to battle come!"

* This chorus it was deemed wise to omit, since we expect to exchange with the Woman's College and other Sunday school publications.—ED.

On rush the gods like arrows from the bow,
 Thirsting to join in bloody direful Mars,
 Their god-like virtue with hell-born spite.
 That hero son of Robin leads the van,
 Who stops within cuss-shot of his wild foe
 His band, and speaking sends a winged word to them,
 Saying : " Minerva's offsprings, Heaven's pride,
 Let mother wisdom on this glorious day
 Of us her children dear be justified."
 Inspired by these words the demigods
 In bold array advance against their foe,
 Who filled with nameless terror wait their doom.
 Trembling, the cowards curse their natal day.
 They curse each other's fortune, fates, and all
 That urged them lure the gods to Stygian shades.
 They curse and swear and foul corruption breed.
 Too scared to flee they stand a fuming mass,
 A stagnant, festering sore upon the earth's
 Fair face. Out from their rank of pestilence
 There sallies forth the biggest freak of all,
 That human clothes-pin, whose two-yard legs
 Do dangle from his thick long chin. Him meets
 The god-like brave much running Mullen.
 The fury hurls his purple oaths at Mul,
 Who smites him on his brainless pate
 Which yields to Heaven's light its contents rare
 Of goose grease and stale beer, and thus
 The fury falls and hiccoughs up his breath.

(Hiatus in MSS.)

Beaten, the panic-stricken yelping imps
 Rush toward the gloomy purple wave
 Of Styx's death-ridden stream, which having reached, they find Charon asleep. Him, some now seize
 And bind ; into the skiff now others haste to hurl
 The fated Bogue, and swiftly now they ply the oar,

But all in vain. For like the rush of wind
In March, on come the gods whom nothing stops!
Into Back River's stinking tide now plunge
Mullen the brave and Guggenheimer bold.
On swim these gods while lapping waves congeal
Upon their vests, and freeze their paper collars
Unto their rubber-necks. In spite of all,
On through the frozen flood they make their way.
On, on, like wriggling maggots through soft cheese.
Their glorious courage reaps its own reward
For soon they reach the fast receding skiff.
O brazen Mars! Thou mighty God of War!
What direful shrieks now rend the ether blue.
Hear now the hiss of spite, the howl of rage
Which hurled the disappointed hopes of hell.
Hear now the god-like songs of victory.
Behold the struggling furies sink into the mud
While sputtering they wallow through the tide.
See! Mul and Gug bring back the rescued Bogue.
The conflict rages now on land and sea:
O Muse! what horrors greet my eyes, my ears,
The roaring echo of thunder rolls, and heaves
The earth, mid lightning flashes lurid glare;
The firmament embroils the seething deep;
Mountains into descending ether leap.
All, all proclaims the help, the aid of Zeus,
Which to the demigods he swiftly brings.
Where are the furies now? O tell me, Muse!
In the lowest pit of hell behold the breed
That dared to brave the gods. A quivering mass
Of senseless flesh now weeping tears
Of gall at every pore—a conquered race.

Little Joe, The Wave-maker.

ONE day lit-tle Joe went to see his friend So-phie. He found her cry-ing be-cause she was not to go to the sea-shore with her Un-cle, as she had hop-ed to do. "I'll nev-er see those big waves Un-cle Henry told me a-bout," she boo-hoo-ed. Joe hated to see her cry. He had so kind a heart he was nick-named Sweet-man. "Nev-er mind," said he, "we'll m'-make s'-some waves of our own." Then Joe went home and gave away some fish he had and brought his fish-tank to So-phie. He gave the fish to a man named Brooks. He thought they would like him on ac-count of his name.

He had whit-tled a nice pad-dle out of a shing-le, and with this he and So-phie learned to make dif-fer-ent kinds of waves. "This is good fun," said So-phie, "but I'd ra-ther see the re-al waves." "B-b-but our waves have all the ad-van-tages of ex-peri-ment over ob-ser-va-tion," answered Joe. "What do those big words mean, Joe?" asked So-phie. "They mean," said Joe, "that t-t-tank waves will mind us and s-sea-waves w-wont. Be-sides, tank waves are much safer. If we stood on the edge of the sea, the w-waves might car-ry us off and d-drown us." After that the tank was their fa-vor-ite play-thing. They talk-ed a-bout waves a great deal. Some-times they danced hand in hand, play-ing they were waves them-selves.

When Joe was older he learn-ed that waves in the air make sound, and that waves in a thin kind of stuff, called e-ther, make light. He studied these waves so hard, that he be-came a great sci-en-tist. When you get big, dear children, some of you will study the books Joe wrote, a few of you may even study un-der Joe him-self.

DEAR HULLABALOO:

I saw in your book last time a lot of letters from other little boys and girls, and I thought I would write one, too. I want to tell you about a funny class of schoolboys I saw in your school a little while ago. My nurse took me down to see Mister Christwith, who owns the schoolhouse, and who likes me very much. When I got there I heard an awful loud noise in a room upstairs. Mister Christwith told me it was in the Romantic Cemetery. He said Doctor Georgecie was teaching the boys Selective Spinach. I wondered why he made all that noise when he was teaching.

He told me Doctor Georgecie was a big strong man and he could jump over as high as my waist. Once he ran a whole half-mile without stopping. Just then somebody called Mister Christwith away. When he had gone I peeped in the key-hole. It did not look like a Cemetery at all, but had a long table and some seats around it. The teacher was sitting at the end of it and four or five boys near him. My, he was a funny looking man with his hair all standing up on his head like it was fraid of him. When I first peeped in, they were all singing answers to his questions out of one book. Some of the questions had real funny answers, like, "You talk like a pickle, Doctor," and "Speak with the face and not with the feet." I guess he knew what they meant, though. When they got tired of singing, the funny looking teacher said something out loud, but none of the boys were listening to him. They were all playing. Some of them had nickels in their hands and were comparing the dates on them. The others were throwing the table way up in the air, and catching it before it hit the ground. After a long time the teacher made them stop by telling them he would keep them in after school if they did not be good. After that a little fat boy with fire on his head got up and waved his arms up and down. Then he counted, one, two, three, and all the boys hollered something as loud as they could. After awhile the boys began to play tag around the table. One of them said some real bad words out loud which made me so scared that I ran over to the other corner of the hall. Soon some other boy came up the steps. He was a real wild looking creature. His legs were so stiff that it made him walk queer-like. He made some funny sounds which the boys inside the Cemetery heard, and they opened the door and grabbed him, and put him under the table. I started to run over to see what they were doing with him when Mister Christwith came back and called me. I guess the wild boy was a crazy man. I hope you will print this real soon.

Your Reader,

JANIE DE LUCY.

Riddles.

I.

(With apologies to Rudyard Kipling.)

A Prof. there was—the pride of the staff,
(Even as you and I.)
And he cracked his joke, and he laughed his laugh,
And he bandied his superabundance of chaff,
Making the hour seem scarcely a half.
(Chinning like you and I.)

Oh, the yarns he told, and the smiles he smoled,
At the risqué'ness of the same!
As he lovingly lisped them with twinkling eye.
(To be sure you have noticed his scintillant eye,)
(And of course you can guess his name).

He's not a Paderewski,
Nor an artist of renown,
He's not a football player,
Nor a wild man come to town.
But he wears his sandy chignon
In a manner that might be Expected of a Coxeyite,
Or female chimpanzee.

II.

Ting-a-ling-ling, what a dear little thing,
Riding a bike and trying to sing.
Goes in the gym, in a suit of white tights,—
Haven't you noticed? He's one of the sights.
Isn't he sweet,—look at his feet,
Pity his hair's getting white as a sheet.

III.

Who is it with a look of better days?
So unobtrusive—gliding softly by.
About his mouth, a smile sardonic plays,
And—get on to his pants'-guards! Oh, my eye!

IV.

He's not a hair-restorer ad,
A cow-boy, nor a squaw;
He's not a Kansas Populist,
Though he has a Bryan jaw.
He's not so very many things,
The question seems to be:
Who, where, and what's this man? Do tell!
Why he's—well, let me see.

V.

You couldn't understand a word he says,
You needn't think because you're good you could.
You couldn't jabber like him through your “nez,”
Nor roll your rumbling r's down with your food.
With his Parlezvousbejaberswhatitis,
Oh! it's anything but human speech you'll say.
He'll rattle you a good deal worse than fizz,
And then he'll smile and say, “qui suis-je, eh?”

The Genesis of the "'99 Hullabaloo."

THE hour for the HULLABALOO meeting has arrived. The heavy tread of large feet supporting a small delicate frame with an enormous head, swollen or otherwise, is heard along the corridors of McCoy Hall. Amidst the sniling approval of hanging portraits, Mr. French takes his editorial chair. The gavel falls. Silence reigns supreme; in fact, the unusual silence causes the Editor-in-Chief to raise his brow with an alluring smile, for he thinks that he has subdued his unruly band at last. When lo! he furnishes a remarkable example for the student of Physical Expression of Emotion, for he notices that none of his associates are present.

Now Mr. French belongs to a society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Language, and he learned at his initiation into this society that the best way to avoid using the superlative of "darn" is to count the numerals until his angry passions have subsided; and so it happens that the same worthy Mr. French is uttering the numeral seventy-one thousand one hundred and forty-four (7-11-44), when Mr. Downes rushes into the room. As everyone knows it requires more than ordinary phenomena to stir the quiet and reserved nature of this gentleman, and therefore Mr. French begs his associate to be seated, and to tell him the cause of his excitement.

Whereupon Mr. Downes unfolds his tale of woe. He informs the Editor-in-Chief that he had met Mr. King on his way down town to endeavor to secure the Odeon Theatre for the Musical Club's concert, which was to take place shortly. "Ridiculous!" shouts Mr. French. "The proprietor told me the other night when I met him at the prize fight, that he wouldn't think of having a gleeful crowd of lunatics discordantly desecrate his stage, for he feared that it would offend his usually refined audience. As he expressed it, 'I couldn't stand for——'"

"Never mind," interrupts Mr. Downes excitedly. "Listen to the rest of my story and you won't be in a condition to quote. I saw Mr. Fisher in the study hall and I did my utmost to persuade him to attend the meeting, but he informed me that he had finished only three hundred pages on the Dean's Essay, and that it would be impossible for him to attend. Then I saw Mr. Grimes, smiling and smirking, walking leisurely down the street with two birds. But this wasn't so bad for he showed that he was patriotic at least, for the birds were Orioles—one black, the other yellow."

Mr. Downes looks up suddenly to see what impression his joke has made upon the Editor-in-Chief, but Mr. French never moves a muscle of his face and I imagine that he must have been envying the charming company which Mr. Grimes was enjoying at that moment.

Evidently Mr. Downes is highly insulted, for he becomes silent and moody. Mr. French continues his meditations for about five minutes, when he breaks out into a roar, which astounds the philosophical Mr. Fosnocht, who just then appears upon the threshold. "As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of a fool," observes the philosopher, as he calmly takes his seat. "But, Mr. Fosnocht," pleads Mr. French, "if you had only heard the joke that Mr. Downes made a few min——"

"Sufficient," answers the philosopher, "if Mr. Downes uttered a single mirthful statement, you may roar from now till doomsday, for it is probable that he will never utter another—at least, let us hope so, for it becomes him not."

Mr. Fosnocht has hardly finished his statement when Mr. Reymann, who has been spending the day at Gordon's restaurant, evidently thinking that this was the easiest method of obtaining admission to the bar, walks, or rather wobbles, to his seat. He seems to be in very good spirits, or rather very good spirits seem to be in him, for he laughs and chatters incessantly.

"Will Mr. Reymann please come to order?" shouts the Editor-in-Chief.

"Sher-shertainly, shir, if you will al-l-low me to tell you a — funny story." "No, sir," shouts the Chief emphatically. Now I've studied all theories of sound, but I can't possibly explain why it was that the positive statement of "No, sir!" should have caused any such echo as, "Go on! Go on!" but we're not dealing with problems of physics, and so I leave the solution of the problem to the vivid imagination of the reader. Mr. Reymann, however, seems to hear only the reverberations of Mr. French's command, and he coughs and hiccoughs through his entire narration. He tells us that he has seen Master Murkland in the Donovan Room, wrapped in thought and an overcoat. He imagined from the expression on his face that Master Austen (with an e, if you please,) was in greater pain than usual, and asked him what was the matter. He was very much surprised, when Master Murkland responded that he was quite undecided whether or not to take gas while posing for his HULLABALOO picture. As Mr. Reymann finishes, he dozes off, amid the roars of his associates, and the sounding of the gavel by the Editor-in-Chief.

Order has hardly been restored when Mr. Grimes comes on the scene. As soon as the door is opened, the editors complain of the odor of musk. Mr. Grimes flushes, and endeavors to prove an alibi, but a kinky hair which is discovered upon his shoulder, exposes him to the derision of his associates. Fortunately for the associates Mr. Mullen arrives most opportunely, dispelling all obnoxious odors by means of a fragrant pipe which adorns his youthful countenance. The anti-nicotine Editor-in-Chief insists that the pipe be extracted from the kid's face, whereupon Mr. Mullen enters into a logical discussion to prove the advantages of the odor of tobacco as compared with musk.

At this point a terrible crash is heard. The door creaks upon its hinges as if unable to withstand the heavy pressure exerted upon it, and Mr. Guggenheimer rushes headlong into the room. "I was so afraid that I would be late, and so—" But his remark remains unfinished, for he notices curls of smoke rising from Mr. Mullen's coat which has caught on fire, either by the heat of one of his own arguments, or because he has excitedly put his lighted pipe into his pocket. Taking in the situation at a glance, Mr. Guggenheimer rushes to Dr. Lee's room, seizes a bottle which he takes to be fire-extinguisher, but which afterwards proves to be hair oil, and returns in haste to put out the flames. The fire instead of diminishing, increases, and Kid Mullen in his frenzy grabs Master Murkland's overcoat, and tries to smother the flames, but all to no avail. A little more "fire-extinguisher" completes the work. A fearful explosion is heard, and from this explosion, from these ruins, from this chaos, issues forth the "'99 HULLABALOO."

BARTHOLOMAY

Brewery Co.'s
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Celebrated Beers

Analysis by the United States Brewers' Academy of New York City. The Beer contains in 100 parts—

Alcohol - 4.07 per ct.	Albuminoids - - - - 0.57 per ct.
Extract - 6.97 per ct.	Lactic Acid - - - - 0.19 per ct.
Sugar - 1.84 per ct.	Mineral Substances - 0.18 per ct.
Dextrine - 2.77 per ct.	Hop Extract, etc. - - 1.42 per ct.
Original Extract of Beer - - - - 14.7 per ct.
Real Degree of Fermentation - - 52.6 per ct.

The Beer is well brewed and free from unconverted starch also well fermented, has a good flavor and a very good and pure taste. Notwithstanding the absence of salicylic acid, the same shows very good keeping qualities, and represents a highly nutritive beverage of excellent quality.

PATAPSCO SUPERLATIVE PATENT

IS THE BEST, BECAUSE:

It is manufactured from the choicest wheat.
It is rich in pure gluten and phosphates.
It is the best tissue and bone-making food.
It is always uniform in quality, color and strength.
It makes beautifully white, sweet and most nutritious bread.
It is unexcelled for biscuit and pastry.
It needs but one trial to insure continued use.

Read what John G. Hall,
Oxford, N. C., says: _____

"I used a half bottle of BLACK FLAG INSECT POWDER, the medium size, on Saturday evening, and upon opening the store on Monday morning, there was not a fly living, save those few which happened to get shut up in the show cases. I think I brushed together fully three quarts of dead flies." It is equally good for Ants, Mosquitoes, Roaches, Water Bugs, and insects on Flowers and Plants, as it is for Flies.
